Chinese Halt Attack, Cling To Mountain, Nanking Key

18 Americans Are Given Ropes to Lower Selves From City's Walls.

Japanese Report Capital Encircled

Major Offensive Stopped by Artillery; Truce Move Rumored.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 9.—Chinese defenders today staved off a major Japanese assault on Nanking from strongly fortified Chinese positions on Purple Mountain, key to the besieged capital.

Artillery and anti-aircraft batteries pounded advancing Japanese units and prevented them from pushing farther than the mountain's foot where they occupied the massive tomb of Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese Republic.

(The 18 Americans still in Nanking were given long coils of rope with which to slide down the 40-foot city walls if the need comes, United States Embassy officials reported to Washington.)

City Is Surrounded.

A Japanese army spokesman declared: "The encirclement of Nanking is completed." One unit was said to have captured the Tachiachiao Airdrome just outside the walls.

Japan formally notified foreign powers to keep tehir warships, merchant ships and their nationals away from Chinese military concentrations.

Foreign sources reported the main Japanese forces still were five miles south and east of their objective.

Once Japanese guns are drawn up on the heights of Purple Mountain, towering 1,300 feet above the city, it was believed Nanking's 50-foot thick walls would be of little avail.

U. S. Embassy Evacuated.

American Embassy officials were reported to have evacuated Nanking, boarding the gunbot Panay.

Those who left were George Atcheson, jr., and J. Hall Paxton, second secretaries; Capt. Frank N. Roberts, military attache, and Emile Gassie, embassy clerk.

Rumors spread of truce negotiations between China and Japan to save Nanking.

Japan's Ultimatum.

The Japanese, now surrounding Nanking, have not launched an unreserved attack on the city despite thorough preliminaries. Some sources interpreted the delay as an invitation to the Chinese to sue for peace.

Authoritative quarters, at the same time, expressed the belief the departure of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek from Nanking might cause his subordinates to seek a settlement. These sources reasoned his followers even might form a new government to win Japanese recognition.

Reports through Japanese channels said Japan would issue an ultimatum demanding surrender of Nanking to avoid heavy bloodshed and destruction.

(At Tokyo a Japanese foreign office spokesman hinted that the United States, Great Britain, Germany and Italy were attempting to mediate the conflict. None of those nations' embassies, however, would comment either on possible collective or individual peace efforts.

(A Japanese apology for aerial bombing of two British merchantmen, the Tatung and Tuckwo, and the British gunboat Ladybird at Wuhu was announced in London. Indemnities, it was said, also were being considered.)

Straus Allots $30,500,000 to Cities' Housing

USHA Administrator Is Confirmed, Announces Low-Rent Plan.

By Sidney Olson.

The nomination of Nathan Straus, of New York, to be administrator of the United States Housing Authority was confirmed by the Senate yesterday even as Straus announced tentative ear-markings of $30,500,000 in future allotments to cities in the slum-clearance, low-cost housing program.

Stars told reporters he will set new rental rates for Public Works Administration housing division projects, "so low" that the $134,000,000 investment of the Government will not be recovered.

Incomes Too Low, Eccles Says.

On Capitol Hill, Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, predicted a continuation of the present business recession would make budget-balancing impossible.

Eccles told the Senate Banking Committee, in the course of hearings on the new Wagner-Steagall private housing bill, the present depression can be traced to unbalanced prices.

Incomes of farmers, unorganized workers and Government employes, he said, are too low in comparison with incomes of other groups of the

D. C. Cold to Stay; Frigid Wave Kills 16; South Hit Hard

The severest cold wave of the season held the Eastern Seaboard and much of the Nation in its icy grasp last night, causing at least 16 deaths and inflicting heavy damage on the South's rich fruit, citrus and vegetable crops.

Southern farmers were warned the freezing weather probably would continue today, with fresh areas of frigid air moving in from the northwest, as Washingtonians shivered in a minimum temperature of 24 degrees, recorded early yesterday.

Today will be cloudy and colder in the District, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Snow was expected along the Virginia and Maryland coasts. Tomorrow in Washington will be fair and continued cold.

Yesterday's maximum here was 42 at 4 p. m. Missions and shelters in the city were jammed to capacity last night by homeless men.

N. H. Governor Urges Purge of G. O. P. Leaders

Murphy Says 'Best Thing' Would Be for All to Resign.

By the United Press.

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 8.—Gov. Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire tonight called for a complete purge of reactionary leadership in the Republican Party and stated that the "best thing that could happen to the party would be the resignation of all members of the national committee."

Murphy, who won election as Republican Governor of New Hampshire last year when President Roosevelt carried the State by 3,300 votes, declared that "old time reactionaries in the party should realize they have been repudiated by the people."

"The reactionary leaders of the Republican Party are out of step with modern, progressive political thought," Murphy said. "We need a complete purge of the party, with a new group of young, progressive men in charge.

"Under the Roosevelt Administration at present, business is shackled with prohibitive taxes, but the Republican Party as now constituted is unable to grasp its opportunity."

Murphy's plea for a rejuvenated party came just a few days after another Republican New England Governor, George D. Aiken of Vermont, wrote an open letter to the party's national committee in which he declared that "we have become a party of old men."

Engineers Making Monkeys Of Us Again, Warns Savant

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—Dr. Earnest A. Hooton, Harvard's famous evolutionist and anthropologist, tonight predicted that man was in danger of reverting to apedom, and said the skids for his descent had been built largely by engineering.

Dr. Hooton, in the guest address to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, called on the engineers to divert some of their high creative intelligence to stopping the down rush.

Through thousands of years, Dr. Hooton asserted, man kept his mechanical progress in abeyance by killing off the geniuses. In the last ten thousand years, however, the masses have permitted the engineer to live. The result is that most of us "exist parasitically upon the inventive genius of the few."

"The once erectly striding biped," Dr. Hooton went on, "abandons human locomotion and whizzes through the landscape, crouched over wheels and levers worked by his still prehensile hands, and his flat, vestigial feet, no less useful for this purpose than those of his Simian ancestors."

"A premium is put upon illiteracy by the radio and the talking moving picture. These mechanical marvels are the means of worldwide spread of vulgarity, depravity and misinformation . . . stimulated by turning a switch or pressing a button—motor performances without the capacity of a lemur."

"Man made himself out of an ape partly by becoming an engineer. The danger now is that the process will be reversed and the engineers will make apes out of us all."

C. U. Teacher Is Killed in Auto Crash

Dr. Romanus Francois Butin, internationally known scholar and authority on Semitic languages, was killed instantly yesterday when the car in which he was a passenger overturned. He also was a professor at Catholic University and lived at the Marist Seminary.

The tragedy occurred on University road at University Park, several miles from the District line. The Rev. Charles A. Dubray, of the Marist College, was driving the 66-year-old professor home from Baltimore. He said he swerved to avoid hitting a passing car.

Administers Last Rites.

Father Dubray said the car which passed him did not stop after the accident. He was stunned temporarily and regained consciusness to administer conditional absolution to Dr. Butin. A few minutes later the Rev. Edelhard Schneider arrived and administered extreme unction.

The Rev. Andrew S. Keltus and the Rev. William J. Lonergan were summoned from the seminary.

Yesterday morning the seminary observed the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

Dr. Butin was born near Lyons, France, December 3, 1871. He came to this country in 1890 and became a naturalized citizen 18 years later.

After studying philosophy at the Marist College here for 7 years, he was ordained. He had joined the Marist Society in 1893.

Was Museum Curator.

Catholic University awarded him the degrees of bachelor of sacred theology, doctor of sacred theology and doctor of philosophy. He joined the faculty of the university in 1912 as an instructor of Semitic languages and literature.

Dr. Butin was made an associate professor at the university in 1916 and had been a full professor since 1923. He also was curator of the Catholic University Museum.

On several occasions the Harvard-Yale expedition sent Dr. Butin to Jerusalem to take part in its archeological work. Once he undertook a similar expedition to the Holy Land for Catholic University. He also was director of the American School for Oriental Research in Jerusalem in 1926-27.

Dr. Butin contributed to learned magazines in French, German and Hebrew, as well as English.

Superior Deplores Loss.

Societies of which he was a member include the American Oriental Society, the Palestine Oriental Society, the Society of Biblical literature and Exegesis, the Linguistic Society of America and the Catholic Education Association. He was president of the American Committee of Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium. He was the author of several textbooks on Hebrew.

The funeral will be held Saturday morning. Requiem mass will be celebrated at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Profit Tax Condemned By Brookings; Industry Backs Expansion Plan

Manufacturers Insist Government Give Them Free Hand.

Platform Visions New Era of Riches

Confidence in Business Needed by Country, Says Association.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—The National Association of Manufacturers today adopted a platform holding out a brilliant and ever widening future prosperity for America provided industry is relieved of uncertainty and excessive restrictions of government.

Describing the things manufacturing could do for prosperity, the "platform for American industry for 1938" continued:

"Manufacturing cannot do these things as well as it should, and as well as it wants to, if it is shackled by restrictive legislation, burdened with excessive taxes, continually in doubt as to the nature and permanency of Government policies, crippled by labor difficulties, and handicapped by inability to secure sufficient funds from investors.

"Confidence Needed."

"What this country needs is business confidence. Business will move forward producing more goods, and therefore more jobs—if it is permitted to face the future with only the natural hazards of legitimate private competition."

While the wording of the platform was restricted to general terms and did not mention specific legislation, it asked:

"Freedom from Federal control of prices, wages and hours in manufacturing."

With respect to anti-monopoly laws, the manufacturers suggested the desirability of "co-operation with competitors within legal limits on a basis which will assist each unit in the industry to operate under high business standards and enable the industry as a whole to serve the public effectively and economically."

Other Platform Points.

The platform asserted "manufacturers find 'road closed' signs erected at many points. They may be summarized as:

"(a) Legislation which reduces incentive to invest funds. . . .

"(b) Continued uncertainty in-

Institution Recommends Repeal of Law as the Best Solution.

1,560 Corporations Checked in Study

House Gives Up Effort to Tax Salaries of State Employes.

The Economic Front.

The Brookings Institution said after a survey fair application of the undivided profits tax is impossible and urged its repeal.

The House tax sub-committee dropped efforts to levy on salaries of State employes and interest on Federal and State securities.

The National Association of Manufacturers convention adopted a platform painting a glowing picture of the United States' economic future if industry is not oppressed by U. S. regulation.

The Senate rejected, 38 to 37, an amendment conforming to Secretary Wallace's proposals for easing compulsory control provisions.

Housing Administrator Straus was confirmed by the Senate and earmarked $30,500,000 for low-cost housing allotments.

Profits Tax Assailed.

In a study of undivided profits tax impact on 1,560 corporations, Brookings Institution concluded yesterday that fair application of the tax in any form is impossible and recommended repeal of the law.

The Brookings recommendations for repeal of the tax were made public as a House Ways and Means subcommittee, favoring "modification" of the law, ran into a dead-end on another tax quest.

Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, sub-committee chairman, announced abandonment of efforts to tax salaries of State employes and tax-exempt interest on Federal and State securities. The sub-committee decided a ruling by the Supreme Court Monday cut off immediate hope of new revenue from these immunized sources.

Amendment Favored.

But Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, took up the quest where the Ways and Means sub-committee left off. Sumners favors a Constitutional amendment to permit Federal taxation of State salaries, and vice-versa. He is studying recent Supreme Court rulings preparatory to submitting the issue to his own committee.

The Brookings undivided profits tax study, prepared by Dr. M. Slade Kendrick, of Cornell University, in co-operation with members of Brookings' staff, examined proposed "modifications" of the tax, suggested possible improvements in the levy, but declared the advisable course was complete repeal.

"The conclusion reached is unequivocally that the tax should be repealed," said the institution's report.

Small Business Hampered.

"The general arguments in its favor pertaining to taxation equity, the distribution of income and the control of the business cycle do not in the light of analysis weigh heavily as against the adverse effects of the tax in other ways.

"Its fundamental weakness is that it limits the possibility of prompt and flexible capital developments and handicaps with particular severity a multitude of small and medium-sized business enterprises.

"It bears with particular severity upon new companies or those which

Senate Upholds Drastic Quotas In Granary Bill

By Robert C. Albright.

Heedless of warnings by the Secretary of Agriculture against "restrictive" farm plan provisions, the Senate yesterday refused to modify drastic quota requirements of its "patchwork" ever-normal granary bill.

While Administration leaders beat back in the House an inflationary farm-price bid, the Senate defeated by a one-vote margin an attempt to bring its more compulsory bill into line with Secretary Wallace's corn quota views.

As the battle to balance farm supplies raged at both ends of the Capitol, the Agriculture Department

Illness Strikes Down Both Husband and Wife; Only $40 Is Needed to Set Them on Their Feet

When illness strikes both husband and wife at the same time, it can destroy almost overnight their hopes of ever having a home and family.

Mr. C. a young clerical worker, has been in the hospital four weeks. Complications have developed, and it will take at least two months more for him to get back to his job.

Young Mrs. C earned her living before she was married. When her husband's earnings ceased, she took a job in a restaurant. Now an old infection in her foot has become aggravated and she has had to give up the job.

Operation Needed.

She should go to the hospital for an operation. If she does, it will be a few weeks before she will be able to walk on her foot. She asked a welfare agency whether—if she went to the hospital—she could receive help after she returned.

She only wants help during the period of her convalescence. She is sure she can get her old job back, or one similar to it. She has been placed by the Employment Center in the past and has a good work record.

The agency to which she appealed estimated that $40 would see her through her convalescence and thus enable her to support herself and her husband until he can work again.

No. 8—The C Family.

The Post today presents the eighth case among the 25 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables, for whom its Christmas fund will be collected. There is no relief fund for them. They are deserving cases, investigated by an agency of the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money. Unless they are helped now, the amount they need later will be much larger.

Donations Total $83.

If so, send in your gift. Contributions to the 25 neediest cases made yesterday totaled $83, bringing the total sent in to date to $770.25. (List on page 2.)

This in addition to offers of jobs, clothing, wood, food and car tokens. Four persons have said they wished to give Mr. Y a job. All offers are being cleared as rapidly as possible. Although Mr. Y cannot take four jobs, there are four needy men who can. So no offer goes begging.

N. Y. Exchange Studies Drastic Reorganization

Increase in Commissions to Be Pondered as Part of New Program.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—Responding to "reform" pressure from Washington, and the economic pressure of members' dwindling revenues, the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange today moved to consider sweeping changes in administration and an increase in commissions.

Charles R. Gay, president, was authorized to appoint a committee of nine to study "all aspects of a further development of the organization and administration of the exchange."

At the same time, the governing committee received a report from the committee on quotations and commissions proposing an increase in commissions—the amount members charge for buying and selling securities for customers—up to 1' per cent. It was announced th would be considered at a special meeting December 15, with a proposed amendment making the maximum increases 18 per cent.

Told to Clean House.

That sweeping changes in stock exchange administration were under consideration came to light November 23, when William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, called upon stock exchanges to clean house or face drastic Federal regulation. Douglas proposed particularly that the exchange be administered by a salaried expert, executive personnel, rather than by member committees.

Gay gave no indication as to whom he would select for the committee authorized, but it was learned an important group was insisting upon a committee representing the public and all other important elements in the securities business.

One prominent broker said that unless the committee selected met these requirements, the so-called "liberal" group within the membership would select a "rump" committee of its own.

Text of Resolution.

The governing committee's authorization was in the form of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President appoint a committee not to exceed nine persons to consider all aspects of a further development of the organization and administration of the exchange, including, among others, the advisability of making the presidency a salaried office, or transferring greater administrative responsibility to executives, and of making the function of the standing committees supervisory rather than administrative, and to report its recommendations to the governing committee as promptly as possible; and be it further

"Resolved, That the committee be authorized to employ such expert assistance as it may deem advisable."

The report of the committee on quotations and commissions proposes a minimum commission, to be charged the public, of $3 instead of the present $1 minimum, and proposes a minimum monthly service charge of $2 on inactive accounts. It is understood most member firms are charging the $3 minimum per transaction.

Commission rates on transactions made for each other by members of the exchange would be increased by approximately 5 per cent, compared with 11 per cent for nonmembers.

Politics and People

Inclusion of Farm Property in New Housing Bill Is Termed Impractical.

—By Franklyn Waltman—

SINCE less than a month remains before we are in a Congressional election year, I suppose we should become reconciled to a flood of proposals to help the farmer, the veteran, the baker, the merchant and their brothers, even though such proposals do not make sense or would break the Treasury.

WALTMAN.

But there is one proposal which has suddenly come to life on Capitol Hill that should receive scant consideration, and that is one to amend the pending Administration bill to give to rural housing under that measure the same benefits which urban housing will receive.

Well, you may say, what could be fairer than that? Why should the Federal Government establish a system for insuring mortgage loans for the city folks and deny such assistance to those who live, or want to live, on farms? Anyway, that is being said on Capitol Hill, along with the contention that it can be pretty well demonstrated that housing conditions on American farms, from the viewpoints of modern living, are far worse than they are in American cities.

But such contentions give to the proposal a veneer of appealing respectability and logic which it does not possess and for that reason it is necessary to go a little deeper into the matter than some of the "friends of the farmer" in the Administration and on Capitol Hill have done.

The current proposal got into the record last week when Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace appeared before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee to indorse the pending housing bill and to point out that, indirectly, it would be a great help to the farmer since it would stimulate employment in the building trades and materials industry and thus create purchasing power for farm products.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley wanted to know to what extent the farmers had taken advantage of the FHA and the Secretary explained that its provisions did not apply to rural housing, adding that he thought that aspect of the problem might be considered. He undertook to show a need for a better credit mechanism to assist farmers in home building and improvement and he presented a table which showed the results of a survey into the condition of farm homes from the viewpoint of bathtubs kitchen plumbing, central heat, electricity, etc.

One thing led to another, as they always do at a Senate hearing, until Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota—who would break the remainder of the country, if necessary, to help the farmer—suggested that Secretary Wallace have one of his experts get together with experts from the Federal Housing Administration and the Farm Credit Administration and work out an amendment to bring farm homes under the new bill. The committee agreed this should be done and now the trouble has started.

The fundamental fact which the discussion leading to the launching of this proposal ignores is that rural housing cannot be treated on the same basis as urban housing. A home on a farm cannot be separated from the land. Its value, in large part, is based on the earning capacity of the farm to which it belongs, as the FCA has found out in seeking to sell properties on which mortgages have been foreclosed.

There are only two types of customers for farm homes—farmers and persons with some means who want them as summer residences or playthings. The latter class, needless to say, is very limited. Thus when it comes to lending money on a farm house the major question is not the intrinsic value of the house, but the ability of the farm to support a house of such value. For instance, a loan of 50 per cent—much less 80 or 90 per cent—on a house which actually cost $25,000 to build on a farm which would not net the owner more than $1,000 a year at the best would be an unsound loan. The same comparison would apply to cheaper houses and less productive farms.

Farming is a business, and must be regarded in that light. Financing of farm homes cannot be placed on the same basis as urban residential property, which has a market and rental value without regard to occupation of the owner.

If that were not objection enough against putting farm housing into the FHA insurance system, there are others. The Federal Government long ago set up mechanisms for assisting the farmer to obtain credit. Indeed, Government owned or controlled agencies will lend directly to farmers with collateral under more attractive terms than would be possible under the FHA insurance system.

The Federal Land Banks, in which the Government now owns about a one-half interest, will lend on long term first mortgages up to 50 per cent of the value of farm land at 4 per cent. The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, wholly Government owned, will lend on both first and second mortgages up to 75 per cent of the value of a farm at 4 and 5 per cent. In each case the amortization period is 30 years. The cost under FHA would be 5 and 6 per cent, with a shorter amortization period. The land banks have now outstanding about $2,000,000,000, and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation about $900,000,000—or together about 40 per cent of the present farm indebtedness of $7,750,000,000.

These facts would seem to indicate the government already has provided generous financing arrangements for the construction of farm houses for those farmers who own their farms clear. About 55 per cent of all farms are free of mortgages. Of course, a farm already mortgaged could not attract another loan from these sources. Indeed, it would appear that the proposal to extend the FHA insurance to farm housing would be for the particular benefit of farmers already burdened with debt. But should the government undertake to insure further loans to such farmers?

As for the revival of the FHA's authority to insure the modernization and repair loans, which expired last spring, that feature of the pending bill applies to rural as well as urban householders within prescribed limits. But, it has been objected, the terms of such financing are much too steep for farmers to undertake. But why should the farmer enjoy benefits denied to the urban householder?

There may be a great deal of merit in the argument that home financing remains too difficult for the farmer, but that is a problem which should be considered independently of the present housing bill and remedial steps should be taken under the Farm Credit Administration and not the Federal Housing Administration, unless someone wishes to wreck the latter.

New York, Dec. 8.—Announcing "the concluding plan of a 10-year-cycle" of corporate change, Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel Corporation, revealed today the corporation had formed a new management and co-ordinating concern, United States Steel of Delaware, "to secure better co-ordination of the activity of its subsidiaries."

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, will be president of the new concern, which will have its headquarters at Pittsburgh. Fairless likewise becomes president of the parent concern, United States Steel Corporation of New Jersey, effective January 1.

Taylor Explains Plan.

The announcement was made following a meeting of the presidents of subsidiary companies, many of whom will be directors of the management concern.

Taylor's statement said: "To accomplish a closer operating relationship between the several subsidiary companies, it has been concluded to concentrate the supervision of a considerable number of existing subsidiaries, excluding public service and railroads, within a management corporation to be known as the United States Steel Corporation of Delaware, the entire capital stock of which is owned by the parent company, the United Steel Corporation of New Jersey. The companies thus involved contemplate a contractual relationship with the United States Steel Corporation of Delaware, under which they will arrange for its services in a supervisory capacity."

Firms Involved Listed.

The companies whose supervision is to be concentrated in the management corporation are: American Bridge, Co., American Steel & Wire Co., Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, Columbia Steel Co., H. C. Frick Coke Co., Michigan Limestone & Chemical Co., National Tube Co., Oil Well Supply Co., Oliver Iron Mining Co., Pittsburgh Limestone Co., Pittsburgh Steamship Co., Scully Steel Products Co., Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., United States Steel Products Co., Union Supply Co.

The directorate of the co-ordinating company will number 21, of whom 17 have been chosen as follows: William Beye, Chicago; A. N. Diehl, San Francisco; Benjamin Fairless, Pittsburgh; Robert Gregg, Birmingham; B. F. Harris, Pittsburgh; C. F. Hood, Cleveland; M. D. Howell, Pittsburgh; G. C. Kimball and Walther Mathesius, both of Chicago; C. V. McKaig, Thomas Moses, L. A. Paddock and J. L. Perry, all of Pittsburgh; C. H. Rhodes, E. R. Stettinius, jr., E. M. Voorhees and R. E. Zimmerman, all of New York.

Taylor said "this plan, when made effective, will conclude the several major basic factors in plans for the readjustment of the corporation's principal affairs for the present."

On Capitol Hill

Speculators Who Assail Securities Laws Draw Fire of Senator Lewis.

SENATOR J. HAMILTON LEWIS, in best oratorical fettle, yesterday denounced "speculators, tricksters and conspirators" who, he said, are emitting a "doleful wail" to influence Congress toward relaxation of the laws governing regulation of securities.

Reading newspaper comments that there appeared to be a majority in Congress willing to vote against the Administration, Lewis sad criticism of Government policies and attacks upon the soundness of business had sprung up in many parts of the country.

"Is it possible," he asked, "that the manipulations of this design of destruction hope by the cry of danger to commercial securities that they can induce the Securities and Exchange Commission to suspend the law commanding that before issuing of stock it must be shown that actual property is behind the stock to the value of the issue."

"Let us in the Senate proclaim that we know how false all this is. That it is not frightening this body."

A SAILOR yesterday set the House Immigration Committee to pondering what a dictatorship is.

James P. Mullen, National Maritime Union official, told the committee his organization approved "100 per cent" the bill of Chairman Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, to deny citizenship to persons who "believe in or advocate government by dictatorship," but suggested the word be defined.

Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois, said he believed any movement to abolish one of the three branches of Federal Government "would be bound to result in a dictatorship."

But that wasn't quite what was wanted and several members rushed to the dictionary. They still weren't satisfied.

THAT BURNING Congressional contest to decide merits of Maine and Idaho potatoes ended in a half-baked decision yesterday.

Cheered by the presence of Secretary Wallace, the four judges crossed knives in the Speaker's dining room beneath the Capitol dome and ended up with four blank votes.

Announcing the decision—that the judges were unable to decide which were the best—Speaker Bankhead said:

"This is an Irish potato contest. If it were one to decide the potency of the sweet potato the vote would go unanimously for Alabama yams."

REPRESENTATIVE TAYLOR (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, warned the Rivers and Harbors Committee against interference with the "vested constitutional water rights of the arid States of the West." He indicated a belief the Administration's proposal to create seven regional planning authorities would lead to such interference.

J. Spencer Smith, president of the New Jersey Board of Commerce and Navigation, appearing before the committee as the representative of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, described the proposal as "a long step toward centralizing the control of all natural and other resources of the country in the Federal Government."

60 Men Jailed In Union Effort At Ford Plant

U. A. W. Aides Arrested for 'Obstructing Traffic' Outside Gates.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Dec. 8.—Sixty members of the United Automobile Workers of America were arrested for "obstructing traffic" this afternoon when they distributed union literature at Miller road gates of the Ford Motor Co. in defiance of an order by Dearborn city officials.

There was no violence. The men were held three hours, then released on their own recognizance.

Adolph Germer, district organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization, said "we are going to make a test case of this."

Major Sees Arrests.

The union men submitted readily to arrest.

Mayor John L. Carey of Dearborn, who issued the order designating the Miller road section as an area of "congested traffic" and forbidding distribution of literature there, witnessed some of the arrests.

In a futile attempt to avert the arrests, the U. A. W. A. petitioned United States District Judge Edward J. Moinet today for an order restraining Dearborn city officials and Henry Ford and Harry H. Bennett, of the Ford Motor Co., from interfering with the distribution of literature. The complaint charged Mayor Carey's order violated the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, guaranteeing equal protection of the laws. Judge Moinet deferred action.

Union Director Seized

Dearborn police were waiting when the union contingent reached the Ford plant. Police Inspector Charles W. Slamer walked to Maurice Silverman, U. A. W. A. organizer, and said: "I ask you in a peaceful way not to pass out these bills." To that Silverman replied, "I am sorry, but we are going to pass them out."

"If you do, we will have to arrest you," said the inspector. "Is that what you want?"

Then the union men began handing copies of a special edition of the United Automobile Worker to passing Ford employes and the arrests started.

Among the men arrested was Zygmund Dobrzynski, director of the campaign to organize the Ford River Rouge plant employes.

Larry S. Davidow, union attorney, said he planned to petition Gov. Frank Murphy tomorrow for removal of Mayor Carey on charges of misconduct in office, based on the order forbidding the distribution of literature.

Garnett to Resign U.S. Attorney Post

His term as United States attorney for the District expiring January 1, 1938, Leslie C. Garnett, who has served four years as the city's chief law-enforcement officer, plans to resign and either enter private law practice or accept a lucrative position in the Department of Justice, it was learned on reliable authority yesterday.

Speculation as to his successor in the $10,000-a-year post was unbounded, with David A. Pine, now chief assistant, and the man for whom Col. Garnett campaigned prior to his appointment, leading contestant for the position. Pine is a well-known lawyer here and has been actively engaged in the practice of law for many years.

Asked to comment on the report he would not seek reappointment when his term runs out, Col. Garnett would neither affirm nor deny it. He referred reporters to the Department of Justice, where similar silence was encountered.

Because Garnett's term of office does not expire for several weeks, few had anticipated an early indication of his desire for retirement, but it is known he accepted a salary loss when he took over the Federal job and is desirous of recouping his fortunes.

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—He has talked to Stalin and Mussolini, and never batted an eye.

Arriving late, he failed to notice that the gangplank had been taken down as he posed for photographers.

An hour later, he sailed on the S. S. Aquitania. This time, he ran up the gangplank.

NLRB Upholds Craft Union in Bargain Ruling

Smith Dissents to 2 to 1 Decision, Saying Industrial Group Is Weakened.

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board, by a 2 to 1 vote, yesterday certified the Pattern Makers Association as collective bargaining representative for wood pattern craftsmen in the plant of the Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Harrison, N. J. The pattern makers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, comprise a small minority of the plant's workers.

Board member Edwin S. Smith dissented. He said the board's action would weaken collective bargaining efforts of a plant-wide Committee for Industrial Organization union established by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Cites Aid Given by C. I. O.

Chairman J. Warren Madden and Donald W. Smith concluded separate representation by craft and industrial unions in the same plant was not "an intolerable arrangement."

The C. I. O. Union operates on a collective bargaining contract with the Worthington management. Testimony supplied the board disclosed wage increases granted the industrial unionists also were given to the pattern makers.

In his dissenting opinion, Smith said the Pattern Makers Union operated ineffectively for years until the industrial union was set up. He dissented in several similar cases previously decided by the board.

Protest Sent to Hague.

Labor's Nonpartisan League made public yesterday a letter signed by 26 Congressmen asking Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J., to explain reports that police interfered unconstitutionally with attempts of labor organizers to unionize Jersey City industries.

Included in the letter was an excerpt from President Roosevelt's speech Constitution Day calling for "fundamental tolerance and feeling for fair play" to protect rights of minorities.

The league said the letter was signed by Representatives Lucke (Democrat), Michigan; Rigney (Democrat), Illinois; Dunn (Democrat), Pennsylvania; O'Connell (Democrat), Montana; Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Coffee (Democrat), Washington; Hill (Democrat), Washington; Amlie (Progressive), Wisconsin; Gehrmann (Progressive), Wisconsin; Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin; Withrow (Progressive), Wisconsin; Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin; Lemke (Republican), North Dakota; Maverick (Democrat), Texas; Bigelow (Democrat), Ohio; Scott (Democrat), California; Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania; Voorhis (Democrat), California; Keller (Democrat), Illinois; Izac (Democrat), California; Fries (Democrat), Illinois; Teigan (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Burdick (Republican), North Dakota; Schneider (Progressive), Wisconsin; Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, and Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut.

'Nick the Greek' And 4 Aides Get Terms in Prison

Adkins Leaves Gamesters on Bond Pending Test of Search Warrant.

Convicted of violating the District's antigaming statutes, Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos and four of his henchmen were given prison terms by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court yesterday immediately after motions for new trials had been overruled.

Floratos, prosperous owner of a fruit and vegetable stand in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest, was charged with having accepted bets on races. With him, Vicent A. Marino, Bernard Newyahr, John A. Clements and Bennie M. Traub were found guilty.

Justice Adkins sentenced Floratos to a term of nine months to two years; Marino drew nine to eighteen months and the others indeterminate sentences of six months to a year and a day. All were permitted to remain at liberty on bond pending appeal. Reason for permitting bond was, it was explained, the fact that there was a substantial question involved in the trial.

The question, according to Justice Adkins, involved legality of a search warrant upon which the Ninth street premises were raided several months ago. Defense attorneys contended it should have been issued under District statutes when, as a fact, it was issued under the Federal espionage act.

The 5 were among 260 persons arrested in gaming forays several months ago. In all, 65 raids were made and for days police smashed into suspected establishments in an attempt to wipe gambling houses out of existence in the District.

An earlier trial of Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckols, Moe Morganstein, Robert G. Murray and George W. Godfrey, arrested in the same series of raids, also resulted in convictions.

Polish Vice Consul Discovers $88,000 In Wooden Leg

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—The astonishing story of "Noach Goldberg's" wooden leg and how the Polish vice consul in Vienna, desiring the leg for himself, accidentally discovered it held $88,000, was disclosed today in Surrogate's Court by Arthur L. Davis, at attorney for Mrs. Rose Laikin, a dressmaker.

Nine years ago, Davis wrote, Mrs. Laikin's husband, Frank, disappeared. In 1929, when Mrs. Laikin heard that one "Noach Goldberg" had died in Vienna, she began an investigation.

The Polish consulate in Vienna took up the matter of Goldberg's identity, and as it was necessary to settle his affairs decided to sell his few assets.

These included the wooden leg. The vice consul himself had a wooden leg, but Goldberg's looked better. In trying it on, the vice consul touched a hidden spring. Out came 89 $1,000 bills. Later, Goldberg was identified as Laikin.

Railroads Need Subsidy or Rate Rise, Jones Says

By the Associated Press.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said after a White House conference yesterday, "the railroads have got to have increased revenues or be subsidized."

Jones said he had reported to the President that the railroads were in a poor financial condition and he thought they had made out a convincing case for higher freight rates before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Asked if the R. F. C. expected to help the carriers by extending railroad loans, he said it would grant extensions where they were needed, as it does with all borrowers.

He said carloadings were badly off last month. Fortunately, he added, the railroads have no maturities until next fall.

The I. C. C., which has listened for a week and a half to a recital of difficulties of the railroads, heard the sprawling new motor truck industry also is in financial difficulties.

Ship Lines Ask Aid.

Chester G. Moore, secretary of American Trucking Associations, Inc., declared that if the railroads get a requested 15 per cent increase in freight rates, the truckers should receive a similar boost. On the basis of this year's business, he figured that a 5 per cent truck rate rise would produce $75,000,000 of new revenue.

Harry S. Brown, spokesman for the third great group of freight carriers, the International Ship Operators, said the water lines also would demand higher rates. Brown, chairman of the Intercoastal Steamship Freight Association, said they would make their application before the Maritime Commission after the railroad request was settled by the I. C. C.

At the Capitol, Senator Truman (Democrat), Mossouri, acting chairman of the Senate Rail Finance Committee, suggested yesterday the House Judiciary Committee "look into" activities of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, in the 1925-28 receivership of the Chicago, Malwaukee and St. Paul Railroad with a view to possible impeachment proceedings.

Truman proposed the inquiry after committee investigators had submitted evidence which they said showed Wilkerson had "secretly received" arguments in behalf of one plan of reorganizing the road "months in advance" of formal consideration of the plan. Wilkerson had charge of the court proceedings in connection with the railroad receivership.

Truman referred to correspondence between Ralph M. Shaw, attorney for the road's receivers, and Paul D. Cravath, attorney for Kuhn, Loeb & Co., one of the reorganization managers in the receivership.

The correspondence dealt with a request by Cravath that the managers' reorganization plan be explained to "the court" so that the court should not "get any wrong notions about the plan." A subsequent telegram from Shaw to Cravath said that "the matter mentioned in your letter of October 29 has been attended to."

Ruled Against Bondholders.

Edwin S. S. Sunderland, attorney for Guaranty Trust Co., trustee for one class of the railroad's bondholders, testified about the same time Guaranty was urging Judge Wilkerson not to permit intervention in the receivership by bondholders' committees opposed to the Kuhn, Loeb reorganization plan.

Guaranty, he said, took the position it should represent all bondholders and that the Kuhn, Loeb plan was "not before the court." Subsequently, he told the committee Judge Wilkerson ruled against the bondholders' committee in its demand that a hearing be held on the merits of the Kuhn, Loeb plan.

Mrs. P. A. Sweeney Dies at Hospital

Mrs. Grace A. Sweeney, wife of Paul A. Sweeney, special assistant to the Attorney General, died early yesterday at Sibley Hospital. She was 38 years old and had been ill only a few days.

Born in Clinton, Mass., Mrs. Sweeney had lived in Washington for 13 years. She and Mr. Sweeney were married in 1916. Her husband was an officer in the Naval Aviation Corps during the war.

Funeral services wil be held at her home at 5338 Thirty-second street northwest, at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Court Dooms 'Plenocrats' in SEC Action

Enjoins Order Selling Memberships in Get-Rich-Quick Scheme.

To the dismay and chagrin of all those people—one is born every minute, it is said—who love a certain return of 30 per cent on their investments, without any chance of risk or loss, the Universal Order of Plenocrats went boom yesterday.

Judge Charles C. Woodward, of the Northern District Court of Illinois, ruled, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission, that the Universal Order of Plenocrats is no more.

At least, the judge—probably a harsh and unfeeling character with no sympathy for propositions guaranteeing a 30 per cent return without chance of risk or loss—temporarily enjoined the U. O. of P. from selling applications for enrollment as a Plenocrat without registering under the SEC act of 1933.

At the SEC, authorities pointed out that this amounted to the death blow of Plenocracy, as registration would involve proving a lot of things—for instance, the Plenocrats' promise that applicants could retrieve all losses sustained during the depression.

The SEC noted that the applications for membership in the U. O. of P. were sold on representations that such moneys would be used in conducting farms from which there would be a certain 30 per cent per year increase without chance of risk of loss.

The Plenocrats' prospectus—alas, no more to be seen—was pretty wonderful, headed with the words "I AM" and subtitled "A Declaration of Faith in the Universal Creative Principle." It said:

"The mighty 'I AM,' or life principle in man's soul, is preparing to smash the chains of political and economic slavery forever and lead man out into the broad realms of freedom and economic scarcity which is his birthright as a son of the living God."

Supreme Court Curbs Liberty, Ickes Charges

Bill of Rights Changed to 'Charter of Corporate Privilege,' He Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—Secretary Ickes made a new belligerent thrust tonight at the Supreme Court, accusing it of having "gone far to convert the Bill of Rights * * * into a charter of corporate privilege."

It was the first such attack by a major Administration official in some time, and was made by the Interior Department head in a speech prepared for the annual dinner of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Even as he struck again at the court, Ickes denounced some sections of big business, asserting that America's "giant corporations have assumed an overlordship over the civil rights and substantive liberties of the individual."

Assails Absolutism.

This "overlordship," he asserted, has been aided by constitutional constructions by the courts which "safeguard the rights of the largest corporation in its relation to the Government as if it were a mere individual."

Much of his speech he spent in assaulting political absolutism, particularly fascism, amongst the nations following what he termed a "Ku Klux Kode."

Recalling the Klu Klux era in this country, when, he said, men rode forth at night "in the anonymity of cowardice," the Secretary added America now is "far more dangerously threatened by a new madness of nations in nightshirts."

Sees Fascist Peril.

"The kleagles and klokards," he said, "now ride bombers, tanks, battleships and submarines over a field of operations that is international.

Turning to the domestic scene, he denounced "the Fascist-minded men flof America" as the country's "real-enemies."

"All of us," he went on, "have come to pay tribute, just or unjust, to corporate overlords . . . We are just beginning to realize the degree to which giant corporations have assumed an overlordship over the civil rights and substantive liberties of the individual."

The Supreme Court, he said, had a "sad part" in the infringement of civil liberties.

Denounces "Espionage."

" . . . The court has gone far to convert the bill of rights, which was intended as a charter of human freedom, into a charter of corporate privilege . . . At times, when the tide of passion and intolerance has run high, the court has run with it and not against the tide."

"The court has gone out of its way to . . . apply wartime espionage statutes to restrict freedom of speech . . . The court has gone out of its way to apply . . . prohibition statutes so as to expose individuals to searches and seizures traditionally regarded as unreasonable.

"When the Congress, all too rarely, has sought to protect minority groups against racial discrimination and economic coercion, the Supreme Court has frequently nullified its efforts."

Ickes turned then to an attack upon parts of the press, saying that "under the stress of economic forces our press and news agencies are coming more and more under the domination of a handful of corporate publishers who may print such news as they wish to print and omit such news as they do not wish to print. They may even color the news."

"Even the individual news writers have little to say as to what news shall be printed . . . It is rarely difficult for an intelligent person to ascertain the political or economic views of the newspaper owner without recourse to the editorial page. This despite the fact that free government depends upon the free dissemination of news."

Escaping Gas Fells Capital Widow, 75

Found unconscious in the kitchen of her apartment yesterday, Mrs. Grace A. Thompson, 75-year-old widow, was in an undertermined condition in Emergency Hospital last night.

Two gas jets on the stove were open when she found the woman, Mrs. Elias Gelman's resident manager, told the police. Mrs. Gelman said she was attracted by the odor of gas. The fire rescue squad administered oxygen.

Mrs. Gelman said Mrs. Thompson was in excellent spirits and seemed to be happy. Two letters addressed to relatives were found in the apartment, which is at 3206 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Those indicted were Henry J. White, nonsupport; Royal Shepard, Robert Winters, James E. Berry, Horace Brigham, Stanley Taylor, William E. Brown, James Lewis and William H. McGraw, housebreaking; Stanley Gray, grand larceny; George Purdy, Ernest Hasson and Oscar E. McCall, joy riding; Joseph H. Thomas, larceny from the United States; John D. Sumpter, grand larceny and embezzlement.

Penix, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill; Moses H. Moore, mayhem and assault with a dangerous weapon; Sophie Denenberg, Willie Brown and Taylor Blackwell, gaming charges.

U. S. Studying Financing of 3 Big Auto Firms

By the Associated Press.

A titanic struggle with three big motor manufacturers—Ford, Chrysler and General Motors—may be one result of the Administration's current campaign of anti-trust law proceedings.

Attorney General Cummings announced yesterday the auto financing practices of the three companies and their affiliates were under investigation by the Federal grand jury at Milwaukee, Wis.

Representatives of the motor makers had approached the Justice Department, he said, with a request that an attempt be made to "obviate" criminal proceedings by consent decrees which would enjoin the companies from continuing certain practices.

"No agreement was reached," Cummings added in a formal statement. "The grand jury is said to be ready to report its findings on Monday, December 13."

The material already laid before the jury by department attorneys, the Attorney General asserted, was gathered in an investigation of complaints that certain automobile manufacturers had coerced dealers into requiring that car purchases be financed through manufacturer-controlled companies.

The investigation also went into complaints that financing charges included excessive profits, officials said.

Cummings reported the companies involved in the grand jury investigation, in addition to the manufacturers, were the Commercial Investment Trust and its subsidiary, the Universal Credit Co., both affiliated with the Ford Motor Co.; the General Motors Acceptance Co., a subsidiary of General Motors Corporation, and the Commercial Credit Co., a subsidiary of the Chrysler Corporation.

The Justice Department's refusal to make peace with the auto companies followed filing of antitrust cases against a number of other corporations.

Stokowski Bids Garbo Farewell As Star Sails

Incident Revives Romance Rumor Started After Maestro's Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—Greta Garbo sailed for a vacation in Sweden today after a farewell aboard ship with Leopold Stokowski, recently divorced symphony orchestra conductor who came here from Philadelphia to see her off.

For a few minutes after Stokowski's visit, Robert Reud, hotel publicity man and an old friend of the Swedish actress, visited her aboard the liner Gripsholm. Reud said they drank a toast together.

These were the only two friends who saw her leave and her presence in New York generally was unknown until she boarded ship.

It was learned she plans to remain in Sweden for two or three months and will arrive in time to spend Christmas in Stockholm with her mother, her brother, his wife and child.

She is expected to return to Hollywood, probably in April, to begin work on a new picture.

Miss Garbo has denied existence of a romance with Stokowski, but the rumors revived when his wife, the former Evangeline Johnson, recently obtained a divorce. They were married in 1926 and have two children. Later Stokowski intimated he would seek part-time custody of the children although he at first had conceded sole custody to his wife.

Stokowski said he had changed his mind about giving up the children because he was angered over cruelty charges made by his wife in her divorce hearing.

He said heatedly, "I never have been cruel to anything in my life and never to my wife."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Twenty-four hours a day is the working schedule for the D. C. Employment Compensation Commission's office on Indiana avenue for the next month and a half. An $8,000 deficiency allotment from the Social Security Board came through early this week, paving the way for hiring an additional 70 office workers who began the three eight-hour shifts on Monday.

Commissioner John Marshall revealed the Commission's plans late last week, as the office finally got down to normal business routine, after two months of nerve-wracking troubles with the office's electrical system—troubles that delayed the commission's program for nearly eight weeks. Batteries of electrical office machinery demanded a shift from direct to alternating current; eventually the entire building had to be re-wired, walls opened and then re-plastered; and finally early office machinery had to be replaced to use the new type of current.

The hundred-odd regular employes will continue on the present day-shift, Mr. Marshall says, while half the new force works from 4 to midnight, the other half from midnight to 8. Most of the delay has been in the employe-posting office, where individual records are kept for each worker in the District, and it is there that most of the new staff will be employed. Forty-five to 60 days should bring the commission up to date.

Notes: Don't forget the Mississippi State Society dance tonight at the Wardman Park; this group was inactive for a long time, but plan to come out from now on in a big way—and starting off tonight . . . Committee chairmen for the Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes for the ensuing year are: M. M. Celler, revision of laws; L. F. Coter, assisted by Misses Georgia Chapple and Lillian Brown, privileges and membership; Miss Marguerite Krenek, entertainment, and Harold P. Thoreson, order. Other officers are T. C. Ramsey, president; Miss Ann Davidson, secretary, and Herman B. Baxley, treasurer. The association meets next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the old Interior Auditorium, there will be a speaker from the Senate and House.

The Town Meeting Club of the Society Massawa at its last session was entertained by George W. Grupp, of the Maritime Commission, who spoke on "Christmas in Foreign Lands." The Town Meeting Club, a section of the Massachusetts Society of Washington, meets twice a month and all members of the society are invited to attend . . . Two Government employes will have part in a radio broadcast over Station WMAL tomorrow and Saturday, both days on a drug store hour from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m. Miss Dorothea Eicholz, as director and pianist, and Ray Swan as tenor, will be heard, the former an employe of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Swan an employe of the Division of Disbursement, Treasury.

Extraordinary inducement is afforded members of Federal Employes Union No. 262, N. F. F. E., to attend the meeting Monday evening at 710 Fourteenth street northwest. An order for a 12-pound turkey is the door prize that awaits some lucky winner. The regular meeting will be followed by a session of the board of directors of the Credit Union. When all is concluded, there will be a bingo party, free to members. Secretary E. C. Hooper announces plans for an amateur night entertainment to be given on Monday evening, February 14. Ability to play some instrument, sing, dance, give imitations or otherwise entertain is the only requirement for entry. The winners will get prizes.

William S. Kinney, president, Federal Employes Union, No. 261, N. F. F. E., says that "interest is increasing regarding optional retirement" and that "in general the membership of 261 appears to favor certain maximum benefits based on length of service and age, as, for example, an annuity of $1,200 per annum or more at age 60 after 30 years' service." Optional retirement is also favored at lower ages and after shorter periods of service, the benefits to be proportionately less. The local is particularly concerned with the extension of classification to the field service; they oppose the performance of duties by military personnel which could be properly performed by civilians—a generally popular stand.

The Park Service and the National Recreation Association have completed a Nation-wide survey disclosing the planting of nearly 1,000,000 trees in parks of 384 cities during 1935, while the number of plants, bulbs and shrubs set out exceeded 10,000,000.

U. F. W. A., Local 13, RRB, says it has secured a four months' extension for a messenger boy whose appointment had been terminated on the grounds that he had failed to pass the civil service physical examination. "The messenger involved had been informed orally by a commission representative that the examining physician had made a diagnosis of 'psycho-neurosis.'" Benjamin Diamond, chairman, RRB adjustment committee, commented: A diagnosis of this type on the basis of the routine physical examination conducted by the commission is ridiculous on the face of it."

Overholser Talks On Mental Health

Ways of preventing mental illness will be discussed by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, at a luncheon today sponsored by the health committee of the Council of Social Agencies. The meeting will be held at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E street northwest.

Because mental illness is one of the most costly ills in any community, the council's health committee has made public education on mental health a major part of its program this year, according to Mrs. Theresa Dansdill McGee, secretary of the committee.

Dr. Overholser, friend of the late Dr. William Allen White, has been interested in methods of preventing insanity for many years. Other medical authorities who will attend the luncheon include Drs. Robert Olesen, George C. Ruhland and Loren Johnson.

Senate Upholds Drastic Quotas In Granary Bill

increased estimates for this year's cotton crop by 503,000 bales to an all-time record high of 18,746,000 bales.

Stimulating cotton State pleas for farm bill relief, the department's estimates envisaged a crop 768,000 bales larger than the 1926 record production, and foreshadowed possible downward revision of the 1938 soil conservation cotton acreage "goal."

The Senate move to raise the corn supply point at which marketing quotas would be invoked—a step urged by Secretary Wallace to avert too frequent use of quotas—was made by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming. It was defeated, 37 to 38, with corn belt Senators splitting on the proposal.

O'Mahoney asked that quotas not be invoked on corn farmers until supplies exceeded domestic and export demands by 15 per cent, as against the bill's provision for 10 per cent. This would have brought the corn quota system into play only when supplies reached about 2,900,000,000 bushels.

The futile House attempt to write costly and mandatory parity price loans for all farm commodities into the Jones farm bill was directed by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, inflationist leader.

Final Action Tomorrow.

It was defeated, 113 to 81, after Chairman Marvin Jones warned it provided "no limitations and no controls" and would be "fatal" to the objectives of the bill. Rejection of the amendment followed charges its "price-fixing" features would cost up to $7,000,000,000 to administer.

Impeded by acrimonious debate, House leaders abandoned hopes for passage of their bill today, and scheduled final action for tomorrow. Senate debate appeared headed into next week.

The wage-and-hour bill figured in the futile fight for the Patman parity price amendment, when Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, bitter opponent of the wage bill, said its principles ought to be applied on the farm.

"If we are to be consistent in this new philosophy which we have proclaimed," said Dies, "then we must guarantee to the farmer that he, too, shall receive a living wage."

Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, charged Dies with "demagoguery."

The House Labor Committee, which petitioned the right to House action on the wage-hour bill next Monday, will consider changes in the measure today. A statutory 40 cents an hour, 40-hour week bill, favored by the American Federation of Labor, was introduced yesterday by Representative John F. Dockweiler (Democrat), of California.

Huge Cost Estimated.

Patman passed over the question of costs in asking the House to write parity farm prices into its bill, to clinch price consideration in conference. The Senate bill already carries a parity price provision. But while the Senate bill would not guarantee full payment of parity, the Patman amendment would have. AAA officials estimated that if the Patman plan were applied to wheat, cotton and corn alone, it would cost $1,383,000,000 on the basis of November 15 figures.

Defeat of the Patman amendment climaxed sweeping House leadership victories on the farm bill. After tentatively accepting an amendment by Representative Scott W. Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, for mandatory loans, the House struck out the section containing the change on motion of Chairman Jones.

The House turned against Lucas on a later attempt to make corn loans mandatory, and also crushed an effort by Representative Biermann (Democrat), of Iowa, to provide a 45 to 55 cent mandatory loans. Then it shouted down an attempt by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, to kill the bill by striking out the enacting clause.

Profits Tax Is Impossible to Apply Fairly, Brookings Survey Reveals; Repeal Urged

Factual data for the study were obtained from results of a detailed questionnaire sent to 3,600 corporations by Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon. Altogether, 1,560 replies were received. These were turned over to Brookings Institution, which analyzed them and obtained supplementary data.

Conflict With House Plan.

The recommendations for repeal, rather than modification, were in conflict with decision of the House Ways and Means sub-committee merely to modify the law. The sub-committee has proposed exemption from the tax of all corporations earning up to $25,000. Flat corporation taxes of from 12½ to 14 per cent would be substituted in this group. Corporations earning more than $25,000 would be subject to taxes of from 16 to 20 per cent, increasing in relation to earnings withheld.

The Brookings staff studied other proposed modifications, exempting "debt-ridden" companies, earnings spent for plant improvements, and corporations earnings up to $5,000. It concluded that "none of these amendments would reach to the heart of the problem and that some of them present complicating elements."

Might Encourage Debt.

The report said that exemptions merely for the debt-ridden class might encourage indebtedness and exemptions for improvements would treat capital unequally and encourage overexpansion. Exemption of companies in the $5,000 earning class, it said, would affect concerns doing "only a minor proportion of the corporate business of the country."

The sub-committee's plan to exempt corporations earning up to $25,000, the report said, "would of course decrease the number discriminated against but at the same time substantially reduce the revenue-yielding powers of the tax."

Although the Brookings survey advised against retention of the tax in any form, it suggested the following three amendments "if the tax is to be retained."

1. Extension of at least 75 days beyond the close of the taxable year of the period within which a dividend payment is allowed as a credit against the undivided profits tax.

2. Relieve corporations of any requirement that they pay undistributed profits tax on deficiencies in income reported, by giving corporations the right to distribute, without tax, the amount of the tax deficiency assessed against them.

3. Allow corporations to make deductions for losses incurred during the preceding three years, in computing their corporate net income. Extension of same privilege to the corporation income tax, the excess profits tax and the personal income taxes paid by individuals and partnerships.

While these amendments would eliminate some of the most flagrant weaknesses of the law they do not warrant the retention of the tax," said the report.

Practical Difficulties.

"The practical difficulties in applying such a levy to the complex and varied organization and operation of American industry are such that equitable and effective administration is impossible."

No position was taken on the capital gains tax, which the House sub-committee also has agreed to modify. The report did not attempt to determine whether in the true economic sense capital gains or losses properly fall in the income classification, it said. But it pointed out that application of the undivided profits tax increases inequalities arising out of counting such gains as income for tax purposes.

It further pointed out that capital gains are taxed in full, while capital losses are deductible only to the extent of capital gains, plus $2,000. Thus, the report said, the law attempts a segregation of capital gains and losses, but it applies the same rate of taxation—normal and undistributed profits—to both types of income.

The report found little basis for arguments that corporations forced to pay out most of their earnings to avoid the tax could obtain needed capital from other sources. It found that although large stockholders are taxed more heavily, small stockholders as well are penalized by the payment of higher taxes on earnings accruing to them which are retained by corporations as surpluses.

Against arguments that the tax would help to smooth out the business cycle, the study found that the shock of the depression beginning in 1929 was cushioned by the surpluses at which the profits tax is aimed. Some $22,000,000,000 in accumulated surpluses was distributed in three acute depression years, probably accelerating recovery in its initial stages, the report said.

Meantime, Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, called up in the Ways and Means sub-committee yesterday his proposal to repeal retroactively the undivided profits tax, and drastically modify the capital gains tax. The sub-committee submitted it to the Treasury for estimates of revenue losses it would cost the Government.

The sub-committee's decision to abandon the attempt to reach tax-exempt securities and State salaries followed analysis of Monday's ruling by the Supreme Court that States could tax income of independent Government contractors operating in their territory. The decision reiterated earlier rulings against Federal taxation of State salaries and tax-exempt public securities.

The sub-committee tentatively decided to require filing of income tax returns by any individual having gross receipts of $25,000 or more, whether or not he was required to pay a tax. It also voted to deprive any nonresident alien spouse of a resident American citizen of the privilege of filing a joint income tax return.

population, while farm prices are too far below prices of basic industrial materials such as steel.

The recession will continue until prices are in balance, the Reserve Board head said.

House leaders meanwhile abandoned efforts to spur House Banking Committee hearings on the private housing bill. Indications were last night the bill may not be ready until the week-end of December 18. Numerous interests opposed to the bill have applied for time, there is no great hurry now since the wages-hours bill will enter the arena next Monday, and Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, of the committee, plans to re-write the measure in condensed form.

Straus' confirmation was unopposed, as Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who questioned his qualifications while his name was before the Senate Labor Committee, withdrew his opposition earlier. Straus had stated several weeks ago he had divested himself of all holdings and interests, thus spiking the belief he retained holdings in Hillside Homes, Inc., his Bronx housing project.

Earmarkings Given.

Yesterday he said the PWA projects could not operate "at rentals within the needs of slum dwellers and still pay off the cost of construction." He announced new rental schedules of $5, $6 and $6.50 per room per month. The earmarkings were:

Pittsburgh, Pa., $10,000,000; Detroit, Mich., $10,000,000; Bridgeport, Conn., $3,600,000; Syracuse, N. Y., $2,500,000; Jacksonville, Fla., $1,000,000; Columbus, Ohio, $1,500,000; East St. Louis, Ill., $1,500,000; Annapolis, Md., $400,000.

Further earmarkings will be announced soon, he said.

Eccles asserted at the Senate hearings that the fact the stock market has advanced without expansion of credit accompanying the 1929 boom was a factor on the "brighter side," while the present recession was without the forced liquidations of 1929.

Eccles said of the proposed housing bill that foreclosure costs must be absorbed by lending institutions and that these range from $300 to $500 because "there seems to be a racket. If we could get the leaders of business and labor to recognize the need for reduction of costs—the advantage of an annual rather than a high hourly wage rate for labor—we would get a better balance of prices," he said.

Adjustments Harder.

He described the hourly wages of organized labor in many fields as from 25 to 100 per cent above 1929 levels, and said that with more organization among workers "resulting in increased wage-hour contracts the problem of making adjustments is more difficult than ever." He went on:

"I see no prospect of modifying that. However, everybody would be better off if wages and prices were adjusted soon. The slowness of the adjustment will determine the length of the depression."

Additional inducements to private capital, beyond those offered in the bill, are necessary if private capital is to have a construction boom, he said.

volving Federal regulation of industry beyond the field of necessary public safeguards.

"(c) Policies which have the effect of redistributing existing wealth and income instead of endeavoring to produce more national wealth and income. . . .

"(d) Taxes which are unduly burdensome both in amount and character; which make no allowance for previous losses when taxing profits and discriminate against companies with widely fluctuating earnings; which penalize companies burdened with debts; which restrict the amounts spent for plant expansion and improvement.

Unbalanced Budget Hit.

"(e) Continued unbalanced Federal budget caused by excessive Government spending.

"(f) Legislation which stimulates labor controversies or the threat of such controversies; which does not protect employes against any and all coercion; which is unfair to employers and under which only they can be guilty of 'unfair practises.'

"(g) Tariff policies which increase imports of foreign goods competing with domestic industry and labor, by extending the benefits of reciprocal tariff provisions to those not parties to the agreements, giving the benefits and getting nothing in return. Adequate tariff protection is vital to American labor; American manufacturers offer their co-operation in the endeavor to secure such protection.

"(h) Increasing government competition with private enterprise.

"(i) Increasing centralization of economic and legislative power in the hands of the Federal Government."

The platform was adopted after a day in which delegates and visitors to the annual convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel had heard increasingly optimistic discussions of expectations of industry in the near future.

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, saw in development of business and industry between nations by trade agreements a hopeful sign of peace.

L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange, called for close co-operation of four elements of the population—farmer, industry, labor and the consumer.

W. W. Shoemaker, vice president of Armour & Co., saw a developing co-operation between agriculture and labor for mutual benefit.

Sumner H. Slichter, Harvard graduate school of business professor, said recurring "recessions" or "turn-downs" could be expected, but added it was possible for business to prepare for them. He outlined ways in which it could be done, and advocated unemployment reserves to keep up consumer purchasing power during depressions. Malcolm Muir, of "News-Week," also thought depressions could be softened.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. Edward Ray Weidlein, president of the American Chemical Society, and Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan, president of the California Institute of Technology, put together parts of a limitless vista of future scientific and technological advances in industry.

Dr. Victor G. Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey," told how workers could be made happier and more efficient, by proper medical supervision of working conditions, and immediately afterward Frank Purnell, of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., chairman of the industrial working conditions committee, promised the recommendations would be put into practice.

"The onward march of the American people," the report adopted by the association said, "can be resumed and continued only if American industry produces more so that all can have more."

Congress Asked To Help Build Ocean Air Lines

Direct Subsidy Proposed by Kennedy; Other Suggestions Heard.

By the Associated Press.

Congress yesterday received three suggestions that it help develop scheduled air traffic across the Atlantic.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, urged a direct subsidy, advising a Senate committee that "we should not abandon our leadership in air commerce by failing to make proper provision for Government support of overocean flying."

John E. Slater, vice president of American Export Lines, told a House committee the New York company he represented was convinced it would be economically sound to use flying boats to supplement its shipping. He urged that the Maritime Commission be given control of commercial transoceanic flying.

Monopoly Charged.

The House committe also heard a charge by I. M. Laddon, vice president of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, of San Diego, Calif., that Pan-American Airways was monopolizing transoceanic aviation. He said the Government should acquire necesary foreign concessions to permit free and open competition.

Chairman Bland (Democrat), Virginia, told reporters he did not intend to invite Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to testify before the committee about subsidization of transoceanic aircraft. Lindbergh is an adviser to Pan-American Airways. He may be here Friday for a meeting of the trustees of the Carnegie Institution.

"If Col. Lindbergh wants to appear before the committee," Bland said, "he will be accorded the same treatment as anyone else."

Outlining the Maritime Commission's suggestion of a hearing before the Senate committee, Kennedy said:

"It is apparent that the well-developed foreign trade service of the future will be an integrated airwater service, fast passenger traffic and express traveling by air and slow passenger traffic and heavy cargo traveling by water over substantially the same routes.

Would Broaden Act.

"Such an integrated service would, in the opinion of the commission, be superior and far less costly than the superliner services with which other nations have sought to meet the need for increased speed in transoceanic travel."

He urged that the merchant marine act be broadened to make available to overseas aircraft the same aid given shipping in the merchant marine act. That includes construction subsidies of up to 50 per cent of a craft's cost, and operating subsidies as well.

Kennedy urged that the National Mediation Board, which handles railroad labor disputes, be permitted to attempt settlement of maritime labor controversies.

2 Students Flout $4,000 Incomes to Remain in School

Philadelphia, Dec. 8 (AP).—The classroom threatened tonight to delay efforts of two of Theophilus B. Stork's four grandchildren to reap the full $4,000 annual benefits of his "work to get" will.

The old lawyer directed in his will that the four receive dollar for dollar what they earned each year for the next five years, with a yearly minimum of $1,500 and maximum of $4,000 each.

But Francis W. Stork, 26, a Temple University sculpture student, wasn't ready to trade his chisel and mallet for a worker's wage. Ten-year-old Karl Alexander also is in school.

Other beneficiaries are employed. All will receive $4,000 annually at the end of five years.

Nonemploye Right To Picket Upheld By Justice Gordon

Holding that a labor union may picket an establishment, although none of its employes are on strike, Justice Peyton Gordon yesterday dissolved a preliminary injunction barring the picketing of four shoe-repair stores owned and operated by David and Hyman Zoslow.

The Zoslows claimed such picketing was unlawful. Justice Gordon held the case within the Norris-LaGuardia "anti-injunction" act.

He held it was shown a number of employes of the Zoslow company were members of the C. I. O. group, which had sought to obtain a bargaining contract with the company.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The defensive play of two expert partners is a beautiful thing to watch. There is a smoothness about it—a sense of one play fitting naturally into the other—that delights the eye and stimulates the brain. Each lead and follow-suit card becomes almost articulate, until to the uninitiated spectator it appears as though the defenders were reading each other's minds—which indeed they are, in a manner of speaking. Consider the defense of the following hand:

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West laid down the diamond ace, and then shifted to the three of spades. East, with only a second's hesitation, played the Jack instead of the Ace. A diamond was returned. West ruffed, and the deuce of spades was taken with the Queen. Another diamond ruff accounted for the second setting trick.

I do not mean to suggest that there was anything remarkable about this defense, but I feel sure that most East-West players would defeat this contract only one trick. When West leads the three of spades to partner, almost every player in East's position would put up the Ace. They would, I admit, read the opening lead and diamond situation correctly and, therefore, would return a diamond for West to ruff. But West, after ruffing, could certainly not risk leading away from the spade King, but would lay that card down for the setting trick. The second diamond ruff could not materialize.

I foresee widespread objection on the part of my readers to East's "finessing against his partner, by playing the Jack instead of the Ace of spades." I will be asked, "How could East know that West had the spade King, and that the Jack would hold?" My answer is just this: East could not be dead sure, but he could know that unless West had the spade King, defeat of the contrac. was out of the question. The spade Ace and one diamond ruff would not be enough. Moreover, there war every reason to think that West actually held the spade King—his lead of the fourth-best practically guaranteeing that he was leading from an honor, and, with the cards in East's sight, that honor could be none but the King.

The extra 100 points at Rubber Bridge, while worthwhile, would have been even more impressive had the hand occurred in a match-point duplicate game.

Mexico Uncovers Plot To Slay Cuban Exiles

Mexico City, Dec. 8 (AP).—Police tonight announced discovery of a secret organization, the "Joven Cuba," whose members allegedly planned to execute 20 or more Cuban exiles as "traitors to the revolutionary cause" of Cuba.

Their disclosure followed questioning of four Cubans arrested in connection with the slaying last Thursday of Dr. Pedro Pablo Torrado, former undersecretary of justice in Cuba. Police said Torrado headed the list of the "Joven Cuba."

Britain Ranks U. S. Air Force 'Best in World'

Survey Shows Numerical Superiority; France Falling Back.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 8.—A British survey of world aircraft today noted an "enormous" increase in the size and efficiency of the United States air force to "one of the biggest and possibly the most efficiently armed" in the world.

C. G. Grey made the ranking in his preface to the 1937 edition of Jane's "All the World's Aircraft."

He credited German fighting planes with being equal in power and performance to American and British craft "though not in numbers."

Asserting that all countries were building light bombers of tremendous speeds, he told how fast American and German airliners had produced "a complete turn-around" from heavy bombers.

It was a "ridiculous situation," then, he declared, which found passenger airliners "nearly twice as fast as heavy bombers in all air forces.

"In fact, a year ago some big and medium American passenger machines were fast enough, if fitted with guns, to chase most of the world's high-speed fighters out of the sky."

He cited subsequent British development of the Blenheim bomber able to exceed 300 miles an hour and German concentration on high-speed twin-engined aircraft.

Other points in his survey included:

1. France has fallen behind in technical advances.

2. Indiscriminate bombing of large cities to break the morale of the populace "always is dangerous to the bombing country because it may stir up a national spirit which hitherto has not been particularly concerned with war."

3. Aerial warfare in Spain in the past year has been between "Italian and German supporters" of the insurgents and "French and Russian supporters of the government." None of the original Spanish planes survived, he said.

Train Wrecks Car, Ex-Policeman Hurt

Abram Buckingham, 63, retired District policeman, was critically injured yesterday when his automobile was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad train at the Ardmore, Md., grade crossing.

According to Prince Georges County Policeman Charles Thomsen, who investigated the crash, Buckingham, who has been living in Bethesda, Md., began to cross the tracks a moment after a freight had passed, and found himself trapped in the path of a passenger train. The rear end of his car was smashed.

At Casualty Hospital, where Buckingham was taken by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, physicians said he had suffered a possible fracture of his skull and back and severe cuts and bruises.

The vitcim was retired from the police force in 1933, after 29 years' service.

Our Envoy To Berlin.

The resignation of Dr. William E. Dodd as Ambassador to Germany creates an important vacancy in our foreign service which should by all means be filled by a thoroughly trained career diplomat.

A noted historian, Dr. Dodd's appointment was in line with the tradition which has sent a long line of American writers and scholars to represent this Nation abroad. And had Berlin remained the capital of the Weimar republic, instead of becoming that of the Third Reich, Dr. Dodd might have made an outstanding contribution to German-American relations.

From the outset, however, Dr. Dodd showed himself completely out of sympathy with the philosophy, policies and practices of the Nazi regime. This was fully understandable, but it was certainly not diplomatic. His attitude resulted only in minimizing his utility as the official representative of the United States in the country to which he was accredited.

More than once the United States has been unfortunate in having as its representatives abroad men who have become so enamored of the nations to which they were sent that they tended to become apologists or even propagandists. Dr. Dodd certainly did not err in this direction. But he did err in an equally undesirable manner by indicating in blunt and unmistakable fashion that he disliked his German hosts. In consequence, his position at Berlin became more and more uncomfortable and untenable.

Whatever his individual feelings, the chief consideration for the American Ambassador to Berlin is that our formal diplomatic relations with Germany are cordial. Next to that, the main point for an Ambassador to remember is that Berlin is one of the most important watch-towers from which to follow developments abroad as they affect the United States.

It is essential, therefore, that the new appointee to the Berlin post should be a man trained to observe trends and events; capable of seeing things clearly and seeing them whole; absolutely correct in his attitude to the Government which receives him. There was a time when it made little difference whether or not we were represented abroad by amateurs. That is no longer the case.

The Tide Is Turning.

A dwindling but vociferous element in and out of Congress is still clamoring for application of the so-called neutrality act to the Far Eastern hostilities.

It means nothing to this group that the law runs counter to prior obligations assumed by the United States as a signatory of the Nine-Power Treaty and the Kellogg Pact. It means nothing to them that in invoking that law America would be forced to lend its moral support to a ruthless and self-defined aggressor. And it means nothing to this element that, in giving such valuable aid and comfort to a treaty-smashing state, we should be encouraging war as an instrument of national policy. To befuddled pacifists the neutrality law is a fetish to be worshiped blindly, regardless of consequences.

It is obvious, however, that the move to apply the neutrality act to Japan and China will not get anywhere. Under the Constitution, the conduct of our foreign relations is specifically assigned to the President. And the Constitution also categorically states that "all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land." In other words, the neutrality act must be regarded as inoperative insofar as it contravenes the letter and spirit of the Nine-Power Treaty and the Kellogg Pact.

What is significant in current Congressional discussion of American foreign policy is the number of voices now recalling the United States to its duty as a great power and a peace-loving state. Within the past few days three separate resolutions have been introduced in the House with the single intent of enabling the United States to throw its powerful weight on the side of real peace action.

There is the joint resolution introduced by Congressman Lewis, of Maryland, authorizing the President, in co-operation with other nations, to join in a quarantine of Japan as the aggressor in the present Far Eastern conflict. There is a similar resolution sponsored by Congressman Scott, of California, the intent of which is to "withhold further aid to the aggressor and to assist the victim and so hasten the termination of the (Far Eastern) conflict and the settlement of a just and honorable peace." And there is the still broader proposal made by Congressman Jerry O'Connell, of Montana, in the form of amendments to the present neutrality act, so modifying it as to make its restrictive provisions applicable only to nations found guilty of aggression.

All these measures reflect growing awareness that misnamed neutrality ordinances are not merely useless but definitely injurious to the cause of peace. All they accomplish is encouragement to potential aggressors to count us out of their reckoning, which means stimulus to continuous assaults on the crumbling structure of world peace.

At Chicago, President Roosevelt frankly stated that cynical calculations based on American pusillanimity can no longer be made with safety. The measures sponsored by Messrs. Lewis, Scott and O'Connell are further proof that popular support of Mr. Roosevelt's argument is widespread and gaining ground.

Senator Pittman On Silver.

Last Monday The Post editorially urged repeal of the silver purchase act of 1934 and, incidentally, abolition of the subsidies paid by the Treasury to foreign and domestic producers of the metal. After briefly reviewing the results of the program, the editorial pointed out that it has "brought great quantities of unneeded silver into our Government vaults, leading to excessive issuance of silver certificates against this overvalued metal." It was also observed that such operations "help to inflate the country's currency system and constitute a threat to monetary stability."

In attacking this editorial on the floor of the Senate it was for some reason assumed by Senator Pittman that The Post's indictment of the silver-purchase program—domestic and foreign—was directed exclusively against the domestic bounties. He cited statistics showing that during the period from the end of 1933 to the end of June, 1937, the Government bought 151,800,000 ounces of American-produced silver at a cost of $112,700,000 and issued silver certificates in an amount equal to the cost of acquisition. "Can that," he asks, "be called a tremendous inflation of our currency?"

The answer, obviously, is in the negative. But if the Senator had not been speaking as a special pleader he would have noted the tremendous increase, since passage of the silver purchase act, in the total volume of silver certificates. At the beginning of the present month the silver certificates outstanding reached approximately $1,380,000,000 as compared with only $498,000,000 at the end of June, 1934. And the security behind these issues, it should be remembered, consists of silver bought at varying but highly inflated prices, and held at the decreed value of $1.29 per ounce.

Under the silver purchase act the Secretary of the Treasury is required to issue silver certificates equal in dollar amount to the cost of silver purchased. He is further authorized, but not compelled, to issue a dollar amount of certificates equal to the monetary value of the purchased metal. As a matter of fact, large amounts of silver bullion now held by the Government are available as security for additional issues of certificates. Hence the evidence amply suffices to justify the actual wording of The Post's editorial.

By comparison with the huge subsidies handed out to farm groups Senator Pittman is entitled to minimize the size of the bounties paid to silver producers. But his method of computation underestimates the extent of the benefits. Evidence that world prices are higher than they would be without our artificial support is provided by the sharp recession in London silver quotations following rumors of a change in current Treasury practice. Hence, the bonus which domestic silver producers receive is in addition to those incalculable subsidies which we have bestowed upon silver producers and speculators in every part of the world.

It is easy to see why Senator Pittman wants to divorce discussion of the domestic subsidy from the general operation of the silver purchase act. The procedure enables him to defend the sop thrown to the domestic industry as a form of unemployment relief. This limited subsidy, which by a method of averaging he manages to place at less than $13,000,000 per annum, is alleged to have greatly assisted employment in nonferrous mining operations.

Mr. Pittman's advocacy of the domestic subsidy as a work-relief measure, of course, makes it unnecessary to try to defend it as a monetary policy. He has in no way met the points in The Post editorial. But he has adroitly advanced a wholly opportunistic argument in favor of continuing an invidious and unjustified subsidy in behalf of a single favored industry.

A Tie For Dad.

One swallow, as has been observed frequently, doesn't make a summer. Neither does a day or so of freezing weather make a winter. But when it's accompanied by Christmas card peddlers, and warnings to car-owners to coddle their radiators, fall is not only going, it's gone! All of which leads up to dat old debbil—dead-end of every household—the Christmas shopping list.

Holly wreaths and a holiday glitter are already in evidence in the stores. The aisles aren't yet hopelessly jammed, the salespeople aren't completely exhausted, and the stock isn't altogether shopworn. Everything is still in order for a peaceful, leisurely hunt for yuletide gifts. But try to tell that to the list-makers. An inveterate Christmas list-maker puts as much time, concentration, and revision into this labor of love as an author does into a novel. Unlike the realistic author, however, the list-maker must always work toward the happy ending.

The Christmas list may be approached through two avenues—the direct or the indirect. The direct method is to take stock of what the family needs, jot it down, and then lose the list. The indirect method is to take a sheet of paper, stare at it sternly, and end up by filling both sides with doodles. Either way is guaranteed to make you a part of the cussing, crushing crowd dashing in and out of stores at the last minute on December 24, which is perhaps what you subconsciously wanted to do all the time.

One swallow doesn't make a summer. And one Christmas list doesn't make a shopper. It simply puts the maker in the mood.

Industrial Planning.

Fortunately for the country the recent severe decline in business activity has not been a signal for launching bitter attacks upon New Deal policies. Instead, the reversal has brought a keener realization of the extent to which economic progress depends upon private initiative. That, in turn, has caused the Nation's business leaders to ask very seriously why private industry has failed to meet the challenge of the present by going confidently ahead with plans for the future.

That is a question which Lammot du Pont has undertaken to answer in his address before the National Association of Manufacturers. His nonpartisan, illuminating exposition of the nature of the difficulties that confront business today stands in sharp contrast with earlier bitterly critical attacks upon Administration policies by the Liberty League, with which the name of du Pont was so closely associated.

The shift from negative opposition to constructive suggestions is most hopeful. Mr. du Pont begins by admitting that "the bulk of responsibility for future social betterment should be placed on industry's shoulders." Then he points out that this responsibility can only be discharged by intelligent planning—not for a few weeks or months ahead but for many years. "In my own company," he explains, "certain projects only now coming to fruition had their genesis as far back as eight or ten years ago."

Obviously such long-range planning cannot be carried forward in an atmosphere of uncertainty such as envelops us today. Mr. du Pont's summarization of the causes of the uncertainty that discourages this type of long-range planning is a familiar recital. As he says, "uncertainty rules the tax situation, the labor situation, the monetary situation and practically every legal condition under which industry must operate." To say that industry must be given some assurances of what to expect in the immediate future does not imply removal of all controls, but simply an end to ceaseless experimentation and a relaxation of restrictions that experience has shown to be definite deterrents to enterprise.

As a practical business man Mr. du Pont fully appreciates the magnitude of the task of providing work for the idle labor of the country. His estimate that at least $25,000,000,000 of new capital would be required to give jobs to those now idle is based upon computations of actual investment per employe in more than 100 factories. There could be no better evidence of the importance of giving industry an inducement to go ahead with plans for discovering, developing and pushing the sale of new products and creating new demands for old products by lowering costs.

Without that incentive we should inevitably witness the demise of private enterprise as foreshadowed by Lewis W. Douglas in his very notable speech before the Economic Club of New York. "Governments everywhere in some degree, but here perhaps more than in other democratic countries," said Mr. Douglas, "have weakened the system of traditional private effort and have not substituted for it a system of vigorous collective effort—perhaps because, among other things, vigorous collective action and democratic processes are incompatible."

This statement is a pointed warning of what lies ahead if those uncertainties of which Mr. du Pont complains make industrial planning nothing more than a gambler's guess.

"A slow-motion camera shows that it takes only one-fortieth of a second to wink the eye."—Newspaper filler. And in some cases, 40 years to get through wishing one hadn't.

"Billy Rose to Divorce Fanny Brice, Marry Eleanor Holm Jarrett."—Headline. Eleanor Holm Jarrett? Oh, yes, to be sure—the girl who not only swims like a fish.

Japan's Boy Diplomats.

From the London Observer.

Yoshichika and Tsunechika Tonami, the 12- and 9-year-old sons of an Osaka bookseller, have entered the diplomatic field, perhaps with more success than some of their professional seniors have achieved.

They read in the newspapers of the wounding of the British Ambassador to China, Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, and of the bombing of the American liner, President Hoover.

Then they decided to give up a toy electric train for which their father had given them ten yen and to devote half of the money to flowers for Sir Hughe, the other half for a similar token of sympathy to the sufferers in the President Hoover bombing.

With this aim in view, they visited the British consulate in Kobe and the office of the American steamship company in the same city, and presented their gifts, with appropriate speeches in each case.

Anniversary Letters To The Post

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my sincere felicitations upon the admirable article written by you in the anniversary edition of The Post. It is so comprehensive, so accurate and so well written that it is really a literary monument. Of course, it has recalled to me a thousand things which had passed out of my memory and I am glad to have these old incidents revived.

May I wish for you and The Post, which is endeared to me by a long and intimate association, continued prosperity through the years to come.

HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.
Chevy Chase, Md., Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the occasion of The Post's sixtieth anniversary, I desire to take this opportunity of bringing a voice from the past in complimentary testimony to the journalistic standards set by the present publisher.

My father, Scott C. Bone, for many years managing editor of The Post, carried into his retirement a lasting interest in The Post and its welfare. Subsequently, it was a source of deep satisfaction for him to know, prior to his death in 1936, that the publication of the paper which had been his very existence for the best part of his journalistic career, had been taken in hand by a force that possessed an appreciation of what should be rendered the public in the way of balanced news and independent editorial service. This idea was expressed in his letters on more than one occasion in response to receipt of copies of and references to The Post in our correspondence.

As my mother often expressed it, The Post represented my father's "first love" in his long newspaper career. And it meant something to him to feel that there was a living effort to keep it endowed with character and personality as a leader among national newspapers.

SCOTT W. BONE.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Listening to The Post radio program on December 4, my wife suggested that I write to you, being of the opinion that I could qualify along with the "Smith Family."

My father, John H. Williamson, was in Washington in the troublesome times of early 1877, and he must have been one of your original readers, I can remember that in our North Carolina home two out-of-the-State papers which he always read were The Washington Post and the New York Tribune. He was never without them in the home, and when I came to Washington 44 years ago I continued The Post reading habit and still have it.

While I do not always agree with your editorial department, yet, all and all, The Post is the grandest and cleanest paper in America and is better today than ever.

JOHN H. WILLIAMSON.
Washington, Dec. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations to The Post on its sixtieth anniversary.

A very gracious thing for The Post to have done on this anniversary would have been to eliminate any mention of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, other than just their arrival in this country. Why should it be necessary, every time his name is mentioned in the press, to detail over and over again the awful tragedy of their lives? The whole world knows it and would rather forget the deep sorrow we all felt. Let them have the privacy due them.

Also, why not show the same respect to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor? Why keep referring to the duchess as "Wally."

Freedom of the press and free speech is all right if rightly used, but we go too far with it in the United States and take advantage of its use in showing disrespect where the highest respect belongs.

EMILY WILSON.
Bethesda, Md., Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading The Post of December 5 I was reminded of the fact that I have been a reader of The Post for over 50 years.

When I was a boy I remember that I was on the lookout for the morning paper to see and read about the baseball scores. My father, Justus Schneider, was at that time a subscriber to The Post and after he retired from business he still kept up his subscription, and after I was married I continued to subscribe for it.

We always look for the paper in the morning just like we read the Alexandria Gazette every evening, and if we do not see these papers we feel a little lost.

All of my family think very highly of The Post, notwithstanding that we do not always agree with your editorials; but, then, everyone is entitled to his or her opinion.

I trust that The Post will continue to prosper and keep up its high standards. R. W. SCHNEIDER.
Alexandria, Va., Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a fairly consistent reader of The Post, I would like to express my appreciation of your paper and, in particular, Mr. Brown's reviews of the musical attractions.

I am writing this after having just read Mr. Brown's comments on the Iturbi recital. I thought this a good opportunity, on this anniversary of The Post, to tell you of one reader's interest in Mr. Brown's notes on music.

G. D. THOMPSON.
Washington, Dec. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me, upon the occasion of the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of The Post, to congratulate Mr. Meyer upon the part he has played in bringing it to this milestone with the high standard it has maintained.

No one who is familiar with The Post can fail to appreciate the part it plays in both local and national affairs. Vivat, crescat, floreat.

GEORGE C. RUHLAND, M. D.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of December 6 has called to my attention the brilliant record your paper has blazed for the last three generations. The chairman and the board of trustees of the Better Business Bureau and we, its staff, join in wishing you and your paper many more years of service to the community.

Standing as it does, for high business ethics, The Post is constantly proving itself to be a great aid to the Better Business Bureau in this bureau's efforts to heighten standards of business practices. We hope that the years to come will see an even closer union on the part of those in this work for fuller education and finer, fairer business.

JOSEPH W. MARSHALL.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on the sixtieth anniversary of The Post and for the fine, characterful stewardship which Mr. Meyer has brought to that newspaper. Here's hoping you will be on the bridge of The Post for years to come.

CHARLES J. COLUMBUS.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept our sincere good wishes upon the completion of 60 years of The Post.

Not only have these 60 years been completed but they have been completed with honor and distinction reflecting credit on our city locally and the country at large.

GERALD D. GROSNER.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot let today go by without dropping you this note to tell you not only how much I send you my warmest congratulations upon the sixtieth anniversary of The Post, but also how much all of us who love Washington congratulate ourselves that Mr. Meyer is giving us and the city the rich treasure of a truly great national newspaper. We are all indebted to him for making The Post rank with the New York Times and the Baltimore Sun as one of the significant newspapers of America.

REV. RUSSELL J. CLINCHY.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Due to absence, I am like the fabled Irishman "late for the fair" yet I do wish to convey to Mr. Meyer and his staff congratulations upon the historic anniversary of The Post just celebrated, together with every good wish for the continued success and the invaluable public service of a great newspaper.

The rebirth and expansion of The Post under Mr. Meyer's able leadership is a real boon to the people of the Nation's Capital as it is to the country, and while I cannot promise to be a subscriber and reader for the next 60 years, I will do my best.

JOHN OLIVER LaGORCE.
Washington, Dec. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the many letters of congratulations on the sixtieth anniversary of The Post published December 6, there seems to be only one that will give cause for inventory and retrospect and in the final analysis a basis for the sincere thanks due Mr. Meyer. The letter referred to came from the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Among other things, he said, "I have differed very sharply with some of the editorial policies of The Post, but I have read its pages practically every day for the 20 years I have been in Congress for its great value as a real newspaper."

This very fact accounts for the rapid progress of The Post. Many men who think deeply and are vitally concerned with the affairs of state have been made angry by assertions coming from editorial columns but equally as observant of the fact that opinion never appeared in the news columns. That is worthy of commendation.

The Fourth Estate has accomplished much since the time of James Gordon Bennett and Horace Greeley; yet there is a lot to be done. The Post is not a paragon of excellence, but it is an excellent example of what a newspaper really can be. CLAUDE D. BLACK.
Washington, Dec. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Looking over my paper this morning, my memory went back 60 years, when as a girl of 14 years living with my parents at Fort Myer (then Fort Whipple) I read The Washington Post and I wondered how many were living who had read The Post for 60 years. May I join in congratulating you on the past record and my best wishes in the future.

MRS. LUTHER CLEAVELAND.
Alexandria, Va., Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the occasion of your sixtieth anniversary I thought you might be interested to know that I have been a constant subscriber of The Post ever since my marriage 47 years ago.

With sincere appreciation and best wishes for your continued success I remain ALICE G. BROWN.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My congratulations upon The Post's sixtieth birthday and the excellent issue commemorating this auspicious event. It is certainly a credit to The Post and a valuable resume of the city's progress and achievements.

As president of the Post's Amateur Writers, in 1894-5, I entertained a splendid sentiment for The Post, which has survived during all these years. GUS A. SCHULDT.
Washington, Dec. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read The Post since 1889, picking out words so as to learn to read and spell.

The first year I went to school in the third grade I wrote a letter to the Children's Page, mentioning my teacher's name, and was kept after school for two weeks as a punishment, being told a lady never wanted her name in print. (Times have changed.)

Anyway, I still read, enjoy and subscribe to The Post, so may I congratulate you on your sixtieth birthday.

MRS. CHARLES A. EDWARDS.
Washington, Dec. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations! Happiness! Best wishes and regards. Warmest thanks for superb and valuable anniversary copy of The Post.

The Post Impressionist

"I'm An Old Newspaperman Myself."

WHAT is there about the aroma of printer's ink? As a matter of fact, what is the aroma of printer's ink? I've noticed lots of funny smells around newspaper offices, but none of them remotely resembled ink.

Anyway, the mythical aroma of printer's ink was the indirect cause of an experience I had yesterday which weakened me to such a degree that I still can hardly (in the words of Mr. Jenkins) pound my typewriter.

Mr. Jenkins, I hasten to explain, was the experience. My boss told me before I started out that Mr. Jenkins had been elected grand vizier or something of a fraternal order. We'd had a complaint from the organization because we weren't giving them enough publicity, the boss said, and here was our chance to do the right thing by the order and Mr. Jenkins.

* * *

The change which came over Mr. Jenkins as I entered his beautifully manicured office in the Agriculture Building and introduced myself should have warned me of what was to come. His air of apathy, characteristic of Government executives at 4 in the afternoon, gave way to a certain briskness. He pumped my hand in a brotherly fashion, and in his eye was a glint which made me feel for one wild moment like the Wedding Guest in the grip of the Ancient Mariner.

Then it came.

"Glad to see you, young lady," he said warmly. "I'm an old newspaperman myself."

I flinched but managed to force a smile and the usual trite response, "Is that so?" As I explained my mission, I made a notation on my pad.

"That little confession is off the record, of course," he added in a tone of alarm. I said he needn't worry, which was the truth. The notation I made was purely statistical in nature. It was just a reminder that Mr. Jenkins had become the ninety-seventh old newspaperman I have met in a year and a half of reporting. He brought the total to 39 Government workers, as against 55 press agents, a dentist and two taxi drivers.

Later on in the interview, I classified him as Type B. Type A, in my system, is the reformed newspaperman who considers his journalistic experience a phase which he is proud to have outgrown. His tendency is to look down on reporters as cases of arrested development.

Type B, on the other hand, is the "old grad." As the professional college graduate usually acts more like an undergraduate than an undergraduate does, so old newspapermen of Type B resemble the more-repellent cinematic portrayals of reporters more than do the reporters themselves.

* * *

Little by little I wrenched from him the story of his election, which was all but submerged in a welter of autobiographical material about the time he worked on the Elmira Gazette. Every anecdote he told seemed to be stretched over a permanent framework of words like "scoop," "beat" and "deadline."

Suddenly he interrupted himself. "Speaking of deadlines, when's yours?" he exploded. "You'll have to pound this out in a hurry if you're going to make the bulldog, won't you?"

"Deadlines are one thing I never worry about," I said languidly as I bummed another cigarette. "I figure if a story is good today it'll be just as good tomorrow."

Crestfallen but not defeated, he began giving me a few injections of esprit de corps. "You haven't had time yet to get the feel of the game, probably. But you just wait! The roar of those presses, the smell of that printer's ink—they'll get you!"

It was then that I got to wondering about the aromatic qualities of printer's ink and decided Mr. Jenkins must be getting me. I put away my pad and pencil with an air of finality.

"By the way, young lady," he said waggishly as I rose to go. "How did you happen to hear about all this, anyway?"

I had started to fish from my purse a letter from the corresponding secretary of the organization, who provided complete details of the election, when he broke in:

"Uh-oh, I'd almost forgotten! A reporter never reveals . . ."

I didn't hear the inevitable because by that time I had scuttled down to the other end of the hall and was engaged in conversation about the weather with a pleasant-faced old gentleman I found there. He was pushing a broom around the halls and didn't look very bright but I had a feeling he'd never ever heard of "Front Page."

Manners For Motorists.

After all, traffic regulations are nothing more or less than codified common sense and courtesy in the use of our streets and highways. The man who violates them is either reckless or ill-bred.

Safe driving is simply mannerly driving. Yet it is remarkable how many ordinarily courteous people become boors once they are settled behind a steering wheel.

Traffic violations will continue so long as the public tolerates them. And traffic accidents will continue until autoists learn to apply the same rules of courtesy while driving as they do in their homes, in their offices and on the sidewalk.

LaGuardia As President.

THIS IS NOT my regular day for instructing the people on matters of foreign policy, but the talk of Fiorello LaGuardia for President next time around forces my hand.

PEGLER.

A few months ago, in a speech preliminary to his campaign for mayor, Mr. LaGuardia said Adolf Hitler was too low to rate the honor of satisfaction in a duel—which is about the dirtiest crack that could have been made at a man who has kidded himself and a lot of Germans into the belief that he is God's boss. And, as if that weren't enough, the Little Flower, for lagniappe, added that Adolf belonged in a chamber of horrors.

Well, then, how do you do? The whole crew of professional wild men in Germany went crazy at once. They not only took socks at the Little Flower but they were so mad that they printed stuff about the whole American Nation and the American people which was just too dirty for repetition in American newspapers even as information. They have some smelly similes and figures of speech in their everyday language which are indecent by our standards, and in their frenzy at LaGuardia they shot the works.

• • • •

ONLY the non-dirty remarks could be reproduced here, and these included a general description of Americans as a race who wear their hats indoors, put their feet on the tables and spit at the walls. They also threatened to take an interest in our domestic affairs which would cause us inconvenience, and the effort to fulfill this threat may be seen in the establishment of Nazi military camps in rural regions and anti-American bunds in the big cities, led by agents who took out American citizenship in order to cover their activities with the privileges thereof.

It is not easy to become alarmed about this activity, because the Americans in the neighborhood, far from being seduced, got sore instead at the effrontery and rudeness of a group who take liberties with our hospitality which would land an equal number of Americans in prison if they were to try the same thing in Germany.

These camps and bunds pretend to be unconnected with the Nazi government, but, like the Russian Communists in the days before they realized that they had taken in too much territory, the Nazis do much funny business abroad on the nod, so that it will be impossible to prove up. They wouldn't exist if the Nazi government didn't want them.

Well, then, suppose the dice fell in such a way that LaGuardia does become the next President of the U. S. A. Our head man is then a man who called their head man a maniac, and they are very self-conscious about their Adolf's dizzy utterances, which were crazy even to them until they finally decided that the really normal state of mind is the crazy state and that sane people are nuts.

• • • •

WHAT WILL they do then? Wouldn't they consider it a deliberately unfriendly act on the part of this Nation to elect a President who had said their head man belonged in a chamber of horrors? And what does a nation do in case of a deliberately unfriendly act? And, in the meantime, what do we do?

One thing is sure—in the meantime, which is to say during the Presidential campaign, the Nazis will be horning into our private business of selecting a President. Do we take that from anybody, especially in view of the threat published with the consent of their government to take an unpleasant interest in our affairs? And if our little mayor gets elected President and they get tough, how much do we take off them before we start muscling back, as Jimmy Gerard used to do in the days when the Kaiser thought God was a corporal?

Over in England, Winston Churchill wrote himself a piece a few years ago for one of their magazines, calling Hitler a lot of names that LaGuardia, with all his languages, never has put tongue to. That makes Churchill unavailable for any important government position even though the British should want him, because the British are trying to kid the Nazis along until they can get their dander up. In that sense the Nazis are interfering in British affairs, but they just have to take it.

We may not want the Little Flower for President for reasons of our own. But if we should want him, would we have to ask some other country's permission?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Culbertson Divorce Hearing.

Judge—You wish a divorce, Mrs. Culbertson?

A.—I do.

Judge—Well, go ahead! It's your lead.

A.—Oh, so it is. I beg pardon; I was thinking of something else.

Judge—That's all right. All bridge players are like that. Now just how do you want this divorce?

A.—How do I want it?

Judge—Yes; in spades, I assume.

A.—Quite so. I've always been lucky in spades.

• • • •

Judge—You complain, I understand, that your husband was cruel. Do you mean when not playing bridge?

A.—Of course. All husbands are cruel when playing bridge.

Judge—When did you first notice that he was cruel toward you?

A.—I don't remember.

Judge—That's funny; I thought topnotch bridge players remembered everything. Just what did this cruelty consist of?

A.—Well, he was easily exasperated. He flew up violently on many occasions.

Judge—On other occasions than when you trumped his ace.

A.—I never trumped his ace.

Judge—Madam, that makes you a wife among wives and I congratulate you. Were you sufficiently tolerant of his failings; I mean did you make allowances for his weaknesses?

A.—He was too good a card player to admit any weaknesses.

Judge—Don't you think you and your husband might have gone on as a happily married pair?

A.—No.

Judge—Why not?

A.—It just wasn't in the cards.

• • • •

Judge—Your husband has made a settlement, I understand. Was it satisfactory?

A.—Not at first.

Judge—What do you mean by not at first?

A.—He made a bid and I doubled it.

Judge—I see. You were playing the one-over-one system. When you first met Mr. Culbertson, was it love at first sight?

A.—Hardly. A trained card player always takes a second look.

• • • •

Judge—As a jurist, I hate to grant a separation until I am sure there is no other way out. Are you sure that your troubles are not due to a factor not mentioned here?

A.—What, for instance?

Judge—Well, couldn't it all be blamed on all those funny little sandwiches bridge players always have to eat?

A.—No, after you have played as much bridge as Ely and I have you don't mind the sandwiches. You can even drink the tea.

• • • •

Judge—One more question. Did your husband go over the bridge hands on the way home by taxi?

A.—Always.

Judge—Decree granted!

A Yip From The Doghouse

White Contrasts Aims Of 'Progressives' And 'Liberals.'

By arrangement with the editors of The New Republic, The Post reprints an article by William Allen White which appears in the current issue of the magazine.

THESE LINES are written because they have been lying heavily on my chest for a long time, say five or six years, and I asked The New Republic to print them. The title also is of my own wording. I seem to represent, or at least feel I speak for, a group of neolithic liberals who once inhabited these lands and had a place of some power and prestige before the coming of the great Ice Age, and now all that we stood for, our whole ideology and dialectic, is rejected and we are in the doghouse and we know it.

That I may define my crime, let me identify us as those liberals who for a quarter of a century before 1932 believed that if we could change the environment of the underprivileged, give them better housing, better wages with which they could buy better food and better clothes, educate their children in better schools, afford them decent amusement and profitable diversion, we would approximately solve the problem of poverty. We used to think that maybe if we could arrange a social order in which the differences in social reward would be reflected in the differences in social and economic capacity to serve society we would have done something really worth while. Our whole plan of social salvation was to cherish and deepen human self-respect.

The thing we were trying to do from the days of the first Roosevelt and during the dark years that followed Wilson, through Harding, to Hoover, was to brace up the human spirit in those social and economic areas where class differences were cruelly marked and wickedly depressed. But it was the human spirit that we were tinkering with.

As an incident of our problem, of course, we sought to improve the environment. We were environmentalists as a means to an end. The end was "the pearl of great price"—a phrase, by the way, hanging over from the nineties when our forebears were Christian socialists. By working as liberals who were called progressives in the elder Roosevelt's day we remained in the two old parties. There we have held a balance of power in Congress and most of the Legislatures for a generation. Most of the whole body of our national legislation in these 30 years has been fairly forward-moving. But tariff bills were all had because the log-rolling legislative process made it possible for conservatives to unite easily.

Gains Noted In Fight Against Acquisitiveness.

NO ONE can claim that we achieved a revolutionary objective. I think it is fair to say, however, that we did gain a little nationally in the struggle with the possessive and acquisitive forces that more or less dominated the prosperity of the first three decades of the century. Part of the gain came through political action; part of it through public opinion, which moved through rancor those who labored and created the wealth of this country to demand larger rewards.

The same public opinion probably shamed the acquisitive forces somewhat and they felt it was smarter to be just than it was to be greedy. This same public opinion, liberal public opinion, if you will, which worked in politics to maintain a balance of power, worked in commerce and industry to bring about a rather wider distribution of things in America than was manifest in other countries. This distribution of things fooled us. We thought that some way a formula of progress could be found hidden in the workings of our prosperity. That folly got us off on the wrong track.

We forgot our objective, which was the human spirit. We began to think that the whole trick could be done by distributing toothpaste, automobiles, radios, bathtubs, parks, playgrounds, high schools, libraries, extension courses and canned soups to those who hitherto had been denied these sweet boons.

So when the great ice sheet came in the early part of the fourth decade and millions of men and women were hungry and cold, we old neolithic liberals were out. They sent us to the doghouse, and here we are. We still believe that it is the spirit we are seeking to benefit and enlarge. We still believe that the quest for justice cannot be achieved by force. We are confused, bedeviled, bewildered, at strong-arm methods. We are shocked at the sit-down strike; we are sick at heart at the revelations of the La Follette committee; we hate the tyrannies of fascism and the Nazis; we are nauseated at the Soviet executions. At home we loathe Tom Girdler and distrust the class-conscious appeal of the one big union. We know theoretically that the principle of the C. I. O. is right. It must come to that in the end. But we are a bit white-livered and don't like to see it come to that by coercion and the labor racketeer.

To us here in the doghouse of desuetude, liberals who believe in a step-at-a-time inching toward Utopia by the evolutionary process all under the orderly form of democratic government, the devil seems to be walking abroad whacking our ideals with a club. We are willing to admit that our scheme of things, unless it is modified, won't work. The gradual enlargement of the human spirit by improving human environment won't work with 10,000,000 men and women probably permanently out of work in a system that requires a body of permanently idle workers if free experiment is permitted in our industrial life. But on the other hand, neither will things work, with the proletarian elbow in the middle-class rib jabbing the daylights out of the bourgeoisie.

Lawmakers Seen Hobbled By Opinion Of Middle Class.

LAWS ought to do something. But what laws? We are all agreed that there should be a basic minimum standard of living below which no family should be allowed to fall. Both Landon and Roosevelt talked about that last year and many of us liberals thought that the difference between what Landon would do and Roosevelt would do in the matter of political achievement you could put in your eye. For after all neither Landon nor Roosevelt could go faster than the march of the middle class.

We liberals are acutely conscious that the middle class generally elects the mayor and always elects the sheriff. In nine cases out of ten the Governor comes from the middle class and is affected by its ideals. Mayors, sheriffs and Governors control the machine gun, and whether Roosevelt was elected or Landon was elected the machine gun in the hands of the middle class would certainly come out just as surely and just as swiftly if the labor question was to be settled by force, if it was to be a matter of class-conscious struggle. And what happened last spring? The police club, tear gas, the machine gun appeared just about as quickly after the cellophane-encased revolution of November, 1936, as these middle-class first aids to law and order would have appeared with Landon in the White House. The fundamental working political formula of the old-fashioned liberal is the bitter knowledge that no President of this country is ever going to go far out of line from the ideals of the middle class.

So the class-conscious solution, which is an appeal to force under the proletarian dialectic, looks rather hopeless to us. The middle class has the President—any President. It also pretty well controls Congress. So when it comes to writing the law which shall guarantee a legal minimum standard of living, it seems almost to be an insurmountable task. Take a look at the Black-Connery wages-and-hours bill in Congress. Who wants it as it is? Obviously, labor is divided on the subject. Middle-class opinion is foggy about the proposed bill. Who can change it so that it will be generally acceptable? And yet we at the west end of the clothesline, we liberals in the doghouse, aren't much wiser here than the leaders of the second Rooseveltian revolution.

The Rooseveltians thought they had a monolithic party of 27,000,000 voters, which ought to be able to do anything. What they had was 16, 17 million office-hungry, victory-loving party Democrats who would have been just as hungry and just as happy under Jack Garner. With these Democrats were 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 earnest, honest, radical working people; 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 Negroes; 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 farmers, and the unemployed. The monolith cracked with a resounding pop when the President started his court fight. A lot of victory-loving Democrats, having achieved their victory, weren't interested in his control of the judiciary. When the President said "a plague on both your houses," a large chip cracked off the monolith on the left, leaving a spawl bigger than a bone! The thing wouldn't hold together. It wouldn't hold together largely because it was heavily weighted in the middle by the middle class, which same is true of America. America is heavily weighted by the middle class. If you appeal to the ballot box, the esteemed M. C. has a majority. If you appeal to the machine gun, Democratic Mayor Kelly of Chicago has a machine gun and so have Roosevelt's two little altar boys, the Democratic Governors of Pennsylvania and Ohio. And did they use the guns? More than that, the middle class has the tidy capacity for organization, a tradition of coherence in time of danger, and a solidarity based somewhat upon the strength of property, actual or prospective, which will turn it fascist overnight—and dirty.

Middle Class Dispenses Only Presidential Mandate.

THE ONLY PARTY that can operate under a mandate backed by dependable force and not relying on reason and the will of God is a middle-class party. Franklin Roosevelt's tall talk of a personal mandate was a mere rhetorical figure. Mandate as what? Party leader? Mayor Kelly's? Pat Harrison's? John Lewis'? Father Divine's? Tom Pendergast's? The Farm Bureau's mandate?—the cat's foot. F. D. R. had the same mandate as the foreman on the Tower of Babel. The President has a mandate to go just as far as he can persuade the conservatives and liberals of his party to get together and march. Hoover, who grumbled often at the Western progressives, had the same mandate that Roosevelt has, and what did it buy him? In the same sentence insert the names of Coolidge, Harding, Wilson, Taft, Theodore Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland and it reads the same. It always will read the same in this generation. And chiefly because of the political recalcitrance of what my Congressional friends call the Boorgoosey. The middle class demands two middle-class parties, plutocratically supported, in which it can safely make snoots at the rich.

And yet it was to the middle class and to the middle-class people we neolithic liberals of the first third of the century appealed. We had an iridescent dream of a liberal party which should oppose a conservative party. But it always aborted. It is no nearer now than it was in the days of the Grangers and the Greenbackers, no nearer than it was in the days of Bryan and the Populists, and it is as evanescent as it was when we fought for it with Theodore Roosevelt at Armageddon. Why? Somewhat because of election laws; somewhat by reason of the electoral college. But the two-party system persists because the middle class refuses to think politically in economic terms. It is for property rights, "one and indivisible, now and forever!" It can be wheedled, coaxed, shamed, evangelized or scared into justice. That was our job as liberals. But it cannot be bluffed or badgered. It won't vote with any party with a real united front for social and industrial justice. Yet justice marches on slowly. We were going good from McKinley to Franklin, the all-smartest, but not fast.

All right; suppose our tactics erected a treadmill, getting nowhere, just about keeping up with the aggressions of a growing class-conscious plutocracy. But the net gain of a neolithic liberalism was a keen sense of the plutocracy in the heart of the middle class.

Probably we accomplished something more than setting up a danger signal under the leadership of the first Roosevelt, of Wilson, of La Follette, of George Norris, of the farm bloc and of the non-partisan progressive group in Congress. Heaven knows there isn't much to brag about, and look where it landed us. But as a matter of real politics, of a workable policy for the establishment of justice on this continent with things as they are, what else is there to do but to trudge along the old road? It is easy enough to kick up a row, but then what? Where will force get you? Did it get far in France—farther than in England under the evolutionary process? We old-fashioned progressives who believe, first, that government may be used as an agency of human welfare and, second, that public opinion outside of government, if it congeals solidly, is irresistible in government or in business, still feel that we had something. It was not a cure-all. But it worked, sometimes impotently; often it fumbled. We and our old-fashioned blunderbuss are discarded. We know it. So on behalf of the outmoded, despised and rejected old dodos I throw out these nails, hard, steel nails of irritating doubt for you to gnaw on. Enjoy yourselves.

China Fights On

By Barnet Nover.

The Japanese At Nanking.

THREE COLUMNS of the Japanese army have now reached Nanking and are battering away at the gates of that ancient city which for the past decade has been the capital of China.

Nothing short of a miracle can save the city now. One by one China's defenses in the Yangtze Valley have crumbled before the onslaught of the invaders. Shanghai held out longest, for there Chiang Kai-shek's ablest fighters were concentrated and they performed great deeds of valor in holding back the brown tide from the islands for many weeks.

But once this dike was broken the Japanese found the going relatively easier. And now China's capital itself may soon fall like a ripe fruit into their hands.

• • • •

TOKYO, it is reported by the Associated Press, is in a state of "ecstatic frenzy" over the outlook.

In every war the seizure of the enemy's capital is a major goal of military operations. That is also true in the present undeclared war in the Far East. Certainly the fall of Nanking, while not involving the destruction of the Chinese armies, would give the Japanese conquerors an opportunity to set up a puppet regime with which a trumped-up peace could be negotiated. But this will do Japan no good whatever if the Chinese continue to fight.

It is essential, therefore, if Japan is to win the truce it desperately needs, to persuade the Chinese that further resistance is futile. Otherwise the capture of Nanking will be but another milestone for the Japanese on the glory road to disaster.

• • • •

AS FAR BACK as November 17 the Chinese government reconciled itself to the inevitable by preparing for the speedy evacuation of Nanking and the transfer of government agencies to Hankow and other points further in the interior. This indicated a determination not to throw up the sponge. And only this week a German offer to mediate between Japan and China was politely but firmly rejected by the latter, an indication that China's will to resist remains unbroken.

Nevertheless it is certain that from now on more and more peace talk will be heard. Certain elements in the Chinese government have always held that peace with Japan must be maintained at no matter what cost. To a considerable degree Chiang Kai-shek himself once shared that view as is seen in the fact that he did next to nothing to oppose the Japanese conquest of Manchuria, only half-heartedly engaged in the defense of Shanghai in 1932 and gave way with as good grace as possible to Japanese pressure in the north of China and in Inner Mongolia.

The peace group may now argue that in view of the failure of the Western powers and Russia to come to China's aid and in view, also, of China's weakness China must come to terms with Japan to save what she can from the wreckage.

There are, besides, other elements in China which have never taken kindly to Chiang's leadership. At the time the generalissimo was kidnapped at Sian, they insisted that no compromise must be made with the reds. This was another way of saying that they were not in the least unwilling to sacrifice Chiang.

• • • •

WITH THESE pro-Japanese and anti-Chiang elements in the government, Japan undoubtedly hopes to do business and should they show a readiness to seize the reins of power they will have Japanese bayonets to protect them.

But a truce made by Japan with them will be a truce lacking in durability. In the first place no one since the republican revolution of 1910 has shown such a capacity to retain power as has Chiang Kai-shek. Only he has managed to keep inharmonious and conflicting elements together. His disappearance from the Chinese political scene would result in chaos.

In the second place there is the fact to be remembered that Chiang's change of front on the Japanese problem was not the rash act of an individual but the result of pressures which neither Chiang nor any other man similarly situated could resist.

Chinese resistance to the Japanese invasion was the inevitable consequence of a tidal wave of resentment against Japanese aggressions extending over a period of six years. And this sentiment is hardly likely to subside for long if it will subside at all.

• • • •

THUS ANY GOVERNMENT which makes peace with Japan will be viewed by the Chinese people as traitorous and its members will be in constant peril of overthrow or assassination. On the other hand, no truce can be made that will prevent large numbers of Chinese from indulging in guerrilla war against the conquerors.

That is precisely what has happened in Manchukuo where Japan's task of maintaining order has been infinitely simpler than would be any similar attempt to maintain order in China proper. The massacre last July of Japanese troops at Tungchow by Chinese troops bought and paid for by the Japanese and under the command of a Japanese puppet, Jin Yukeng, is a development which is certain to recur again and again wherever Japan seeks to maintain its control over a Chinese area.

• • • •

BUT SUPPOSE the Chinese government as at present constituted refuses to make peace with Japan, withdraws its troops into the interior and fights on—what then?

Then the outlook for Japan will be black indeed. For with its lines of communications both in the north and the Yangtze valley already over-extended, it will be necessary for the Japanese armies to move farther and farther into the interior to put down resistance. And China, as the old saying has it, is like a pillow into which it is easy for an invader to stick his head but which, if he sticks his head in too far, may smoother him.

'Unbelievable Genius'

By William Lyon Phelps

Lawrence Gilman On Wagner.

LAWRENCE GILMAN, the scholarly and accomplished music critic, has produced a new book on Wagner, which is an important addition to the vast literature that has accumulated around this unique genius.

Unique is the word—I suppose few musicians would say that Wagner was a greater musical genius than Bach or Beethoven; but these two mighty men are among the great composers; whereas Wagner is on a lonely eminence, entirely original, in a class by himself. His operas are worth more than all the other operas of the world put together.

• • • •

HE WROTE the librettos himself, for the first time giving dignity to what had been absurd. Orchestration, the vocal music, the plot, the story, the language, the scenery, the setting all came out of the head of one man—Richard Wagner.

Well, Mr. Gilman has written a book of 268 pages in large type, and in spite of the fact that it is freighted with thought and learning, it is not at all difficult to read. The book is called "Wagner's Operas," and is published by Farrar & Rinehart, New York.

• • • •

THERE IS ONE QUALITY (among others) that I especially admire in Lawrence Gilman. His professional work as a critic (he has heard "Tristan und Isolde" nearly 200 times) has only sharpened the edge of his appreciation; for he has what Goethe said was the one essential qualification of the critic—Enthusiasm. Mr. Gilman says of Wagner, "I am still wordless before this unbelievable genius that I have dared to write about."

This book does not tell the story of Wagner's life or the story of the operas; it is an illuminating guide to their intelligent appreciation.

Tom McCarthy

Why Reporters Get Gray.

"Hello, Mr. Smith?"

"This is Mr. Smith."

"Mr. Smith, this is Tom McCarthy, at The Washington Post. I wonder if I could drop around and see you. I've been told you have a very interesting job. I'd like a little interview about it. May I come up?"

McCARTHY.

"Come right ahead, Mr. McCarthy, I'd like to tell you all about it. It sure is an interesting job I've got. I'm sure people would be interested in reading about it."

• • • •

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Smith. I had an awful time getting up here; I'm always getting lost in these Government buildings."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. McCarthy. Where did you say you were from?"

"The Post, The Washington Post."

"Oh, yes, and you wanted to interview me about my interesting job."

"That's right, Mr. Smith."

"Well, now, maybe I shouldn't have let you come all the way up here like this. You see, maybe I won't be able to talk. Of course there's nothing in the life of the humming bird which couldn't be published, but you know how some of these Government bureaus are. We have to give out all the information through the main office."

"Oh, I realize that, Mr. Smith, but all I wanted was a little story of how you first became interested in the Caucasian moth—or rather the humming bird."

"I realize, Mr. McCarthy, that there's really nothing in my researches which couldn't be published but you know how these Government bureaus are run. We have to be mighty careful. You know we mustn't slight the man higher up. We've got to be mighty, mighty careful."

"But after all, Mr. Smith, it seems to me that a humming bird——"

"I know, Mr. McCarthy, I know. But maybe I shouldn't have let you come up here in the first place. You see all information must come through the main office. Now if you'd go back to The Post and write a letter to the Chief, I'm sure it could be arranged."

"Now look here, Mr. Smith, I've come all the way over here——"

"Well, in that case, Mr. McCarthy, maybe we could make an exception of your case. I'll take you down to the Chief's office myself."

• • • •

"How do you do, Mr. McCormick——"

"McCarthy—McCarthy."

"Oh, of course, Mr. McCarthy."

"Why, Mr. Brown, I've come up here to interview Mr. Smith. I thought it might make an interesting column. You see, it isn't everyone that has such a peculiar job as Mr. Smith. And then, too, there might be a little human interest in just what he thinks about the humming bird after all these years of research."

"Go right ahead, Mr. McCarthy. I'm sure Mr. Smith will be glad to help you out."

• • • •

"NOW, MR. SMITH, let's get down to business. I'd like to hear some of your experiences in dealing with the humming bird."

"Oh really, Mr. McCarthy, there isn't so much to tell."

"Now, Mr. Smith, as I understand it you've been working in this particular field for 15 years."

"More than 15 interesting years, Mr. McCarthy."

"Well, can't you tell me some of your interesting experiences in that time?"

"You know I'd like to help you, Mr. McCarthy, but——"

"O.K., Mr. Smith. Now just take it easy. It's 4:30. I don't want to rush you, but I've spent an hour up here and I haven't got all day. You just sit back and answer the questions. Exactly how long have you been in this work?"

"Sixteen years, Mr. McCarthy. Yes, it'll be just 16 years next month."

"And how did you happen to get interested in the humming bird?"

"Oh, you know how people are, Mr. McCarthy. I guess you'd just call it curiosity."

"But why did you pick on the humming bird?"

"Oh, really, I don't know as I could answer that, it was such a long time ago. I was just a boy when I started."

"But you've been working on the humming bird for 16 years?"

"All right, now tell me some of the interest you've found."

"Well, I don't know as it would interest anyone else."

"Now I don't want to frighten you or anything, Mr. Smith, but I'm getting a little impatient. In fact——"

"I want to give you all the information I can, Mr. McCarthy."

"Mr. Smith, will you kindly remove those glasses?"

"Why certainly, Mr. McCarthy."

"Now will you kindly stand up?"

"Why, I don't understand."

"Now please raise your head just a bit, and look toward the corner of the room over there."

"But this is most unusual."

Films in Color Dominate Bills For Next Week

New Releases and Repeat Runs Offer Variety in the Theaters.

"Ebb Tide," Paramount's all-color picturization of a story by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne, will be presented as chief screen feature of the bill opening tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater. In this Technicolor production, one of the most notable so far released, the chief roles are played by Oscar Homolka, Barry Fitzgerald, Frances Farmer, Ray Milland and Lloyd Nolan. The action is placed on the high seas and in the South Sea Islands. The story is an unusual one. On the stage, the headliners of the week's vaudeville program will be Eddie Peabody, foremost of the banjoists, and Mitzi Mayfair, brilliant young dancer, already known to Washington audiences from many earlier appearances in the Capital.

John Boles, Luli Deste, Helen Westley, Alexander D'Arcy, Frances Drake and Franklin Pangborn will be seen in the principal roles in "She Married an Artist," announced as foremost screen feature of next week's bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. In this gay comedy of artists, models, fashion designers and ateliers there is a wealth of fast-moving and delightful fun in which the pivotal characters romp effectively. It is a Columbia production, directed by Marion Gering. The vaudeville bill for the new week will be headlined by Larry Blake, borrowed from Universal for a stage tour, in "Character Impressions." The Donatella Brothers and Carmen, Joey Ross and Gladys Bennett and Helen Reynolds and her Skating Champions will complete the bill.

Carole Lombard and Frederic March are cast in the costellar roles of "Nothing Sacred," the new Technicolor comedy-drama opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow for a week's engagement. This is the enlivening subject in which Mr. March knocks Miss Lombard cold with a stiff right to the jaw. A notable supporting cast has been selected to support these two amiable players. An added attraction will be "The Man in the Barn," a "mystery" historical subject dealing with the possible escape of John Wilkes Booth after the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theater. The usual short subjects will complete the program.

As was to have been expected, "Stage Door," RKO-Keith's film version of the stage hit by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, will continue for a third week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The principal roles in this greatly improved drama are played in their best manner by Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou, with Andrea Leeds, Lucille Ball and Constance Collier leading the support. The auxiliary attractions also are being held over.

"Sh! The Octopus," described as "the goofiest mystery-farce ever filmed," comes to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins in the foremost roles. The supporting players include Marcia Ralston and John Eldredge. The action centers in a lighthouse and introduces a real squid, a storm on the water, a corpse and a few other essential items in a long catalogue of comic thrills. The customary short-reel features and full newsreel will be added.

For the week beginning Sunday, the Little Theater will present a double-feature bill comprised of Pare Lorentz's new documentary film, "The River," and the film version of "The Petrified Forest." "The River" was fully reviewed in yesterday's Post. "The Petrified Forest" is a revival of the Robert Emmett Sherwood melodrama, in film form, in which the stellar roles are portrayed by Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, with Humphrey Bogart leading the support.

Another "March of Time" week" will be celebrated at the Trans-Lux Theater beginning tomorrow. Other features on the new short subject program will include "Set 'em Up," a reel devoted to bowling, and "Who Killed Cock Robin?" a Walt Disney cartoon comedy in color. There will also be the regular newsreel coverage of the world.

Coming to the Gayety Theater to inaugurate the regular week's engagement with a Sunday matinee performance will be Billy "Cheese and Crackers" Hagen and an all-new musical extravaganza. The feminine cohorts will be led by Joan Marvis and Lillian Harrison. Hagen will be assisted on the comedy side by Harry "Rube" Connelly. A beauty chorus will support the principals.

The Washington Civic Theater will present Andre Obey's play of "Noah" in the Wardman Park Theater, beginning on Wednesday night, December 15, and continuing through the following Saturday. On Saturday afternoon, December 18, an extra matinee performance has been scheduled for 2:30 o'clock. "Noah," by reason of its color and wide use of animals, is looked upon as a fine pre-Christmas offering for children as well as adults.

'The Man in the Barn' Revives Old Controversy Over the Real Fate of Pres. Lincoln's Assassin

Washingtonians Present at Ford's Theater When Booth Fired Fatal Shot, or Surviving Relatives, to Be Guests of Palace; More About "Spring Thaw;" Post Sponsors Xmas Show; "Virginians" Beat the Gun; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

BELL.

THERE is about to be revived in Washington and vicinity something of the discussion that was aroused by the release in February, 1936, of the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "The Prisoner of Shark Island." It will be occasioned by "The Man in the Barn," the short-reel subject to be made a featured part of the bill with "Nothing Sacred," at Loew's Theater, beginning tomorrow.

As was briefly noted in this space yesterday, "The Man in the Barn" again raises the question of whether John Wilkes Booth lost his life at the hands of a Federal squad in a burning barn shortly after he had assassinated President Lincoln in Ford's Theater in this city, or made his escape and died years later under an assumed name in Oklahoma. "The Prisoner of Shark Island" is suggested to mind in this connection because it was based on the story of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd, the obscure Virginia physician and surgeon who treated Booth for a broken leg while he was making a desperate effort to escape the penalty of his murderous act. The whole speculative matter of the Booth fate was revived by the release of the picture. By implication, "The Man in the Barn" throws further doubt upon the story of Booth's death that usually is accepted as authentic.

I say this because according to reliable information, "The Man in the Barn"—a new release in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "historical mysteries" series—was based on supposedly authentic facts unearthed by the research department of the M-G-M studios. Frankly, statements rather more than implying a vast amount of political and official chicanery, by which Booth's escape might have been expedited, are made in this engrossing short subject. It will be of especial interest to Washington audiences and is recommended to their attention as something that ought to be seen for the benefit of both sides of the record.

• • • •

But the point is this. The management of the Palace Theater, headed by the valiant Col. Orangelo Ratio, the Mayor of F street, wishes to trace any persons, or their surviving relatives, who may have been present at Ford's Theater on Tenth street on the night President Lincoln was shot while viewing a performance of Laura Keene in "Our American Cousin." Those located will be invited to attend the Friday night performance at the Palace as guests of the house. If the interest awakened by "The Prisoner of Shark Island" can be resuscitated at this time, the Palace should have a considerable number of guests of honor tomorrow night. It is only necessary for those present at Ford's on the ill-fated night, or their living relatives, to communicate with the Palace management.

A little more comes to light concerning the new Max Gordon production of "Spring Thaw" that will bring Roland Young to the National Theater the week of Monday, December 27. The play will be presented here for its world premiere and will be continued through New Year's Day, with the usual matinees.

In multiple scenes, "Spring Thaw" will be staged by Eddie Sobol, who was recalled from a Hollywood directorial assignment to put on the new Clare Kummer vehicle for the familiar talents of her son-in-law. The settings are being created by that imaginative master of stage decor, Donald Oenslager.

Supporting Roland Young in the new piece will be, among others, Lillian Emerson, Olive Reeves-Smith, Jane Gordon, J. P. Wilson, Esther Mitchell, Tom Fadden, Natalia Danesi and Franz Bendtsen.

Following its engagement at the National, "Spring Thaw" will move to New York for an early January premiere on Broadway. So now you know—unless the whole promising business is rubbed out in the meantime, which seems hardly probable under Max Gordon auspices.

• • • •

With a view to providing a real Christmas for the underprivileged children of Washington's alleys, a kindly alliance has been struck up between The Washington Post and Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, in conjunction with the District Federation of Church Women, to provide toys for the youngsters who otherwise might not have any on the morning of what should be the happiest day in the life of any child. To this end, a special morning performance will be given at RKO-Keith's on Saturday of this week at 9 o'clock, to which the admission will be one toy—or as many more as a charitable spirit may prompt the patron to contribute to so worthy and urgent a cause. The program to be presented will be comprised of short screen subjects that have proved most enjoyable to juvenile audiences. The doors will open considerably in advance of the scheduled time of the performance in order that all toys may be deposited without loss of any of the bill. Come on, friends, with all those playthings and create a little of that warm Christmas glow in the hearts of a lot of sad little kids. You might even get a bit of it in your own.

• • • •

On next Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock, in the Arts Club, 2017 I street northwest, Mme. Eva Sikelianos will lecture on "Greek Music and Greek Architecture and Their Relation to the Drama." His Excellency, Dimitrios Sicilianos, Minister from Greece, will be a guest of honor.

The heads of the drama departments of the various colleges as well as acting groups of the city have been invited to attend. A number of players from the Vagabond and Guild theaters in Baltimore also are coming over for the evening.

• • • •

Owing to a slight over-eagerness to get the lads before the public, the announcement of the coming of "The Virginians" to the stage of the Earle Theater was released a week prematurely by the Warner stentors. These towering singers, meagerly celebrated in this space yistiddy, will not put in their appearance on Thirteenth street until a week from tomorrow, instead of tomorrow. Which only adds up to a full week in which to anticipate them—much better than a mere two days.

• • • •

Dots and Dashes.

As was guessed in this column a few days ago, "Stage Door" is gallumphing along so enthusiastically that it will be continued at RKO-Keith's through Christmas Eve . . . "Hitting a New High," starring Lily Pons in the most unusual celluloid vehicle she has had, will open on Christmas Day—unless something unforeseen happens . . . If you think we aren't playing safe after those National cancellations, you're crazy! . . . Carole Lombard finally has a chance to get even with Freddie March in "Nothing Sacred," coming to the Palace tomorrow . . . After being shoved all over the place through most of the picture, she gets a clear shot at the March jaw—and he can't hit back because it wasn't in the script . . . Lull Deste, who plays opposite John Boles in "She Married an Artist," at the Earle tomorrow, has made a hit with Hollywood . . . A newcomer from the other side, Miss Deste lost no time in applying for American citizenship and expects to receive her first papers soon . . . In the meantime, she has purchased a 180-acre "ranch" which she is stocking with blooded cattle and horses with the aim of breeding them for the market . . . For the thirteenth consecutive season, Dr. Henry Van Dyke's Christmas drama of "The Other Wise Man" will be given in the Luther Place Memorial Church for four evening performances on December 27 to 30, inclusive, at 8:30 o'clock . . . Denis Connell will appear in the title role for the tenth time . . . Bess Davis Schreiner, who made the dramatization, will direct the play . . . An avalanche of late votes made "Seven Keys to Baldpate" the overwhelming winner for the featured spot on Saturday morning's program of the Junior Cinema Guild at the Rialto Theater . . . Owing to the holiday rush, the next bill presented at the Rialto by the Guild, after Saturday's, will be on January 8 . . . Lina Basquette, former dancing star of the stage and films, comes "back to the races" in "Ebb Tide" . . . Plays the part of a native South Sea Island girl and looks the part perfectly in her gaudy sarongs—if that is what they are.

Word-to-the-Wise Note.

Missing Gadgets.

Allan Jones is in bad at home. Daily he takes pictures, ash trays, and the like from his Brentwood home to use in his trailer dressing room on the "Everybody Sing" set. His wife, Irene Hervey, says the house will be bare if she doesn't put a stop to it soon.

Own Decorator.

Betty Furness has turned interior decorator. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress is in the midst of redecorating her Hollywood apartment. So far she has just painted her bedroom set, and made a complete set of drapes for the windows.

Sparring Partners in Color Film

When the new screen comedy of "Nothing Sacred" opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow, Washington moviegoers will be treated to a lively bit of slugging between Carole Lombard and Fredric March. The entire proceedings are photographed in color by the improved Technicolor process. Miss Lombard and Mr. March are pictured above in one of the more placid intervals of the action, sans pigmentation, of course.

Columbia

"Navy Blue and Gold," best of the service films, with the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis as background, reopens on the screen at the Columbia Theater today for a week's repeat engagement on F street.

Combining the highest traditions of the Navy with fine dramatic corollaries of sports and a lively bit of romance, this subject preserves the atmosphere of the famous institution about which it revolves with more than ordinary fidelity. It has as its foremost characters three youths from divergent strata of society who become roommates and share the perplexities, humor, romance and major and minor tragedies induced by the strict discipline of the academy, an engaging love story and the desperate struggle of one of the midshipmen to clear the name of his father of a stigma for which the elder Navy man was in no way responsible.

In the working out of the story there is not only a high flight of comedy and continuous action, but a tremendous emotional tug at the heart as well. The play reaches its climax in an Army-Navy football game that is one of the most amusing and most thrilling climacteric incidents of its kind ever caught by the cameras.

The cast chosen for the interpretation of this sound and engrossing comedy-romance hardly could have been improved upon. The three midshipmen are played with great skill by Robert Young, Tom Brown and James Stewart, with Florence Rice the object of the play's dramatic trend and Lionel Barrymore cast in the role symbolizing the deep-seated traditions of the Navy and the high aspirations of that service in shaping worthy young manhood. Billie Burke, Samuel Hinds, Frank Albertson, Barnett Parker, Matt McHugh and many more are among those who contribute handsomely to the rounded perfection of a screen play that is a model of its kind.

The bill is completed by short subjects of varied interest and a new release of the pictured "Events of the Day." N. B. B.

Screen Starlets To Study Smiles

The bewitcihng smile and animated facial expressions of Fay Wray are to be captured on a special reel of film and used as a guide in study of camera technique by young starlets enrolled in Universal's drama school.

Milton Krasner, who is chief photographer on 'Deadlocked," the production in which Miss Wray is currently appearing opposite Kent Taylor, suggested the new departure in screen coaching after watching the actress go through her scenes on the set. He will personally photograph the study reel.

Among the talented young players attending Universal's drama school, and who will make use of the special reel, are Eleanor Hansen, Constance Moore, Mary Brodel, Marilyn Stuart, Frances Robinson and Marybell Currie.

His Only Shirt Was on His Back

Henry Hull, the famous Jeeter of "Tobacco Road," now under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived in Hollywood with one suit and one shirt. His luggage, forwarded before he left New York, was lost en route to the studio.

Little

"The 39 Steps," Gaumont British's mystery melodrama, in which Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll contributed their first noteworthy portrayals to the American screen, opens a revival engagement at the Little Theater today to complete the final half of a "split week," an innovation in the conduct of this popular Ninth street bandbox.

The story of this "secret service" subject involves both Scotland Yard and the stage. A clever band of plotters utilize a "mind-reading" act in the variety halls of England as a means of transmitting their code signals to members planted in the audience. The manner in which their scheme is exposed forms the crux of an exciting and well executed celluloid melodrama.

The co-stars are supported by a highly competent cast, led by Lucie Mannheim, Godfrey Tearle, Peggy Ashcroft, John Laurie, Helen Haye, Frank Cellier, Wylie Watson and numerous others better known to British audiences than to American.

The bill, which will be continued through Saturday of this week only is rounded out by abbreviated camera subjects of diversified interest and a current release of the picturized news events. N. B. B.

Stewart Paddles A Canoe to Work

James Stewart paddled to work. Instead of taking the fast speedboat, like the others, to the set, when the "Benefits Forgot" company was on location at Lake Arrowhead, Stewart bought a canoe and paddled over. "For exercise," explained the actor.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 8.—Settin' Around (Warner Brothers): Today, watching Mervyn Le Roy at work, directing "Food for Scandal," it struck me that fans would be wiser if they selected their screen entertainment because of the picture's director, rather than because of its stars. Not many theater-goers realize how completely the director dominates the production of a movie. He takes the story from the scenarist, changes it to suit his pet ideas; rules like a Fascist dictator over the work of the players, forcing them to interpret scenes according to his own conception; supervises the editing of the film, and, most important of all, dictates the "tempo" of the picture. The finished production may star this player or that, but, invariably, it is a reflection of its director's tastes and personality. And the canny fan, by studying the "styles" of various directors, can always know exactly what to expect when he goes to see an opus bearing the name of any one of the screen's ace megaphonists.

ERROL FLYNN.

Why not give my suggestion a try for a few weeks? Make a mental note of the directorial quirks in every picture you see and tabulate them against the name on the credit titles. You can't lose—and I will give you odds that at the end of the trial you will admit that you have found a new enjoyment and understanding in your movies.

For one brief sequence in "Robin Hood" there has been built on Warner Brothers' Stage One—the biggest sound stage in Hollywood—a set which leaves me gasping. It represents the great banquet hall of Nottingham Castle—an investment of so many tens of thousands of dollars that Jack Warner must have a sinking spell every time he contemplates it. Errol Flynn acted as my guide on my tour of inspection today—and I came away with a new respect for him. With the enthusiasm of a boy mechanic he pointed out the construction details—the pivots on which the huge doors swing, the wrought iron torch standards, the emblazoned shields that are ranked around the walls. "Everything authentic!" he enthused. And then, standing in the middle of that tremendous room, he said: "You know, I've done a lot of sneering at the tinsel of this business, but when I see the artistry that goes into a thing like this, I'm just a bit proud to be a part of it all."

Watched the "Robin Hood" company filming an archery contest on the back lot and among the hundred or more extras, whose sole job was to stand in the background and cheer on the director's signal, I saw a familiar face—one that many of you undoubtedly remember. Jacqueline Saunders. To most of the people on the set, she was probably just another extra, working for $7.50 a day and glad to get it. But to me, she is drama. As a Hollywood "old-timer," I remember Jackie Saunders as one of the screen's biggest stars. And I remember that, during the World War, that extra I saw today made speech after speech for the Liberty Loan Drive—and offered to buy bonds, dollar for dollar, with the crowd.

"Jezebel," co-starring Bette Davis and Henry Fonda, is being rushed through in double time, probably because the story closely parallels "Gone With the Wind," and the Warner Brothers would not object to cashing in on the tremendous publicity given that long-postponed opus. But Henry Fonda is in favor of still more speed, for he is "expecting" and he wants to join his wife in New York by December 15, when the stork is scheduled to arrive. Between scenes today, he was pacing impatiently back and forth. Director Willie Wyler nudged me. "Watch Fonda promenade," he whispered. "Looks like he's rehearsing for his most dramatic role."

No Speakee Chinese.

Philip Ahn, Chinese actor, who divides the romantic interest with Anna May Wong in "Daughter of Shanghai," speaks perfect English and French fluently, but Chinese is "all Greek" to him, because he was born in Los Angeles.

French Award Is Presented to Red Cross Head

The Grand International Prize of Courage and Devotion, awarded by the President of France to the American Red Cross for its flood disaster relief and life saving, was presented yesterday to Admiral Cary T. Grayson by Jules Henry, charge d'affaires of the French Embassy.

The presentation took place at the national headquarters here of the Red Cross, in the presence of a notable gathering including Gen. John J. Pershing and Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States. The prize is a Sevres royal blue bowl, 14 inches high, accompanied by a medal. It is offered by the National Life Saving Federation of France and had not been previously awarded in the United States.

The award to the American Red Cross this year was in recognition of the work of relief for a million persons overwhelmed in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley floods early in 1937. It also recognized continuous life-saving and first-aid work which the Red Cross has carried on for 25 years.

Chief Justice Hughes, national vice president of the Red Cross, presided later at the incorporators' annual meeting. Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was one of two new members chosen for the central committee. The other was George L. Harrison, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. They replace former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Cornelius Bliss, of New York.

Central committee members re-elected were Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston; William Fortune, of Indianapolis, and Samuel Knight, of San Francisco.

Four new members were elected to fill vacancies on the board of incorporators. They are Arthur Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times; Harold H. Burton, Mayor of Cleveland; David K. E. Bruce, of Charlotte County, Va., son-in-law of the late Andrew Mellon, and Richard M. Tobin, of San Francisco.

James H. Perkins, board chairman of the National City Bank of New York, was elected to succeed the late Felix M. Warburg, of New York, on the Red Cross Endowment Fund board of trustees.

Auld Lang Syne.

Jeanette MacDonald has chosen to keep her old portable dressing room, rather than exchange it for the new streamlined one offered her while she is at work in "The Girl of the Golden West."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 8.

A YOUNG LADY employed as a reporter for the New Yorker magazine was assigned to interview Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House with regard to some Thomas Jefferson and James Madison menus now owned by the First Lady. She went to the private reception room assigned for the interview and there found a huge dog which bit her finger. . . . Two minutes later Mrs. Roosevelt entered, saw the dog and the bleeding finger and shouted for her maid. "Louise," Eleanor Roosevelt berated the maid, "how many times have I told you—to always keep some iodine in this room!"

ERSKINE CALDWELL, who will direct the forthcoming dramatization of his novel, "Journeyman," which Sam Byrd will produce, has been confined to the Mayflower Hotel without any clothes. Caldwell asked his publishers to take his clothes away so that he couldn't get out until he completes the final touches to the adaptation. He was "paroled" twice—once to the premiere of "Of Mice and Men" and for the "Tobacco Road" anniversary party. . . . Emil Ludwig has more than a biographer's interest in the Roosevelt Administration. Ludwig is in the stock market up to his neck. . . . The sheet music for Labor Stage's "Pins and Needles" will show a girl's head attached to a huge body wearing patched clothes. The body was taken from a photo of Herbert Hoover.

MAGISTRATE ANNA KROSS, who denounced Sidney Kingsley in print, will attend the magistrates' social service tea at the Plaza. Her escort will be Mr. Kingsley. . . . The Will Hays office has lifted its ban and so Republic Pictures, for its release on "Glamour Night," will describe that movie as one about "A King Who Gave Up His Throne for the Woman He Loves." . . . William Allen White is coming East to introduce Ickes at the Civil Liberties Union dinner tomorrow. Mayor LaGuardia is trying to duck out of the engagement.

THE DECEMBER 11 ISSUE of Cue will include an advertisement by "Oddities" in which will be listed a sample Christmas shopping list for F. D. R. Among the items are "traveler's writing case for Eleanor . . . shaving lotion for boys and Congress (Democrats) . . . tricky change purse for Henry M., jr. . . . and passport case for Norman D. if stocks rise." . . . "Oddities" is sponsored by Mrs. C. J. Oppenheim of the department-store family and an ardent Republican. Dick Lauterbach, who did the advertising copy, is an American Labor Partyite.

POLICE COMMISSIONER VALENTINE'S forced retirement of 18 captains and inspectors because of their age wiped out the entire surplus of the Captains and Inspectors Association, which pays $1,000 to each member upon retirement. . . . Although 22 days have elapsed since Attorney General Bennett invited Tom Dewey to take over the P. R. prosecutions, he has received no word of acceptance as yet. . . . On December 15, when the Senate opens its new investigation of the Mooney-Billings case, a rally for Tom Mooney will be held at the Garden here. . . . Although the Brooklyn Dodgers Ball Club isn't being sold, there's been a "For Sale" sign up at Judge McKeever's house in Brooklyn.

WASHINGTON INSIDERS predict that Benjamin Buttenwieser of Kuhn, Loeb will be the next president of the Federal Reserve Bank here. . . . The movie bids for Odets' "Golden Boy" now are up to $100,000, with the asking price, $150,000, the price paid for "Three Men on a Horse" . . . The signs for the "Boycott Japan" parade, to be held Saturday, were made by Japanese artists. The parade will be headed by a contingent of Japanese women. . . . Paul Maye, who was punched by James McKinley Bryant in the Grace Moore fight at El Morocco, now has a shiner. Bryant suffered a small bruise on his forehead. The severest casualty was Peggy Morrow, who sat at another table—and who fainted!

BILLY ROSE, who just took over the French Casino, insists that all the money involved is his own—no backers. . . . His "Show of Shows" cast arrives here Wednesday from Frisco—the longest jump in the history of show business. Transportation cost was $12,000. That show's tour has been called off. . . . Rose will use the chorus line—all young girls from Texas—for the new Casino show. The name, "French Casino," will remain—but the producer will be referred to as "M'sieu Billy Rose."

WHEN BRODERICK CRAWFORD opened in "Of Mice and Men," his mother, Helen Broderick, wired him: "Betray me for a night—and don't be a ham." . . . Sylvia Sidney has joined the colony in the Bucks County neighborhood. She bought a farm at Lambertsville, N. J. . . . George White is set to do his "Scandals" for the radio, but the only hitch is that the sponsors want a one-hour show, with White insisting upon a half-hour revue. . . . Jock Whitney, who sailed to Europe on the S. S. Bremen, sent a wireless from midocean to Dave Selznick. It was a simple message: "This boat is full of Germans."

Haiti President Claims 8,000 Border Victims

'Mass Murder' Not a Mere Incident, He Warns Other Nations.

By the Associated Press.

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, Dec. 8.—President Stenio Vincent charged today that 8,000 Haitians had been victims of "mass murder" on territory of the Dominican Republic since October.

He declared that the "internal order and peace of this continent are of interest to all American states and it should not be permitted that one of these states disturb peace and order so profoundly without cause or motives."

(The Dominican State Department, while admitting there had been "border clashes," contended earlier Haitian reports of slayings were "fantastic.")

Haiti 'Surprised.'

The president stressed the view that the trouble was not a mere border incident. He asserted disputes which had existed over the Haitian-Dominican frontier had been settled definitely with signing of a treaty two years ago.

"Until thes unfortunate and tragic happenings which have revealed themselves recently on Dominican territory there had been no question of any nature under discussion between the two governments," President Vincent said. "Relations were excellent.

"You can imagine my government's surprise over this trouble, only two years after settlement of the question of frontiers and not even one year after the famous reunion of American states at Buenos Aires.

Cites Cuban Move.

"If the large Haitian colony in the Dominican Republic had all of a sudden become undesirable, as has been said, that certainly was not reason to try to eliminate it by the horrible means which have been employed.

"The Dominican Republic could easily inform us by the usual channels and the question would have been resolved by regular means, the same as Cuba did when it expatriated thousands of Haitians recently.

"I vow that this government has never received the slightest indication that Haitians, many of whom resided in the Dominican Republic for many years, suddenly had become undesirables, until I heard of the assassinations."

Japanese May Impose Big China Indemnity

Tientsin, China, Dec. 8 (AP).—A high Japanese economic adviser today declared the Japanese army probably would levy a large indemnity on China after peace is restored.

"We might accept control of China's railways for the next ten years or operate China's railways until the indemnity is paid," the Japanese said.

Norway Court Cancels Gold Clause in Bonds

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 8 (AP).—Norway's supreme court ruled today that about $123,000,000 of Norwegian bonds floated in the United States in 1923 need not be paid in gold. The decision reversed a 1936 verdict of a city court that the bonds must be redeemed in dollars equivalent to their gold value before devaluation of United States currency.

Australia in Gesture To U. S. Trade Treaty

Canberda, Australia, Dec. 8 (AP).—Trade Minister T. W. White announced Tuesday the commonwealth in March would abandon its trade licensing system in favor of protective duties.

The change was described as a gesture toward British-American negotiations for a reciprocal trade agreement.

Nazis Predict Seizure Of Church Property

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP).—The current issue of Schwarzkorps, the weekly organ of Dictator Adolf Hitler's blackshirted guard, today predicted that the state soon would seize church property on the ground it belonged to the community.

Johnson Impeachment Papers Found

Misplaced for 70 years, the original papers in the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson turned up yesterday while Capitol employes were assembling and indexing ancient House records. South Trimble, House clerk, who reported the "find," is shown examining the documents.

Who Gets the Papers? Library Of Congress or U. S. Archives?

The Congressional Library has the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and 5,395,044 books. The United States Archives has a beautiful building, although many architects contest that point.

So what the Congressional Library has and the Archives hasn't came to issue again yesterday when sundry documents, histroical, valuable, long-lost, were exposed to light in the Capital after three-months' delving into dust by workers under direction of South Trimble, House Clerk.

An Archives official indicated that the House was "very jealous" of its documents. The Senate turned over its documents to the Archives and is taking pleasure in the orderly, precise and systematic way these are recorded, it was suggested.

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, the Archivist, took a softer tone; said simply, a trifle wistfully, that the House has a resolution turning over its documents to the Archives, "but nothing has been done about it."

It was the latest page in a book of argument over who gets the papers. It flared up, most publicly, in the yearnings from the Archives for the Declaration and the Constitution. But they have wanted other documents, too; now they would like to have those papers South Trimble's explorers uncovered yesterday.

Those papers are full of America's history. Trimble said himself that it was almost a crime how the papers had been neglected. One of these—perhaps the most interesting, but not the oldest—concerned the impeachment and later acquittal of President Andrew Johnson, whose case filled the Nation with flame and smoke and much oratory 70 years ago.

The papers on Johnson were listed under "original resolution;" they were in excellent condition, though the coverings were crinkled and yellowed. They found, too, a commission to Benjamin Winchell as fourth sergeant in the fourth company, for "invading Canada and carrying war into the heart of the enemy's procession and to proceed therein." MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

War Plebiscite Move Pressed By Sumners

House Judiciary Chairman to Ask Committee Today for Action.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners, chairman, today will ask his House Judiciary Committee to begin hearings soon on the Ludlow constitutional amendment providing for a national referendum on war.

Sumners, affectionately known to members as "The Old Fox," planned this action yesterday after learning that 200 names—18 short of the required majority—had been affixed to a petition to dislodge the amendment from his committee.

To Block Progress.

With House leaders frankly worried lest the amendment—which is directly counter to Administration policy—reach the floor, Sumners' action was expected to block progress on the amendment for this session, as hearings could run on indefinitely.

Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, sponsor of the amendment, objected vigorously last night to the projected hearings, saying:

"There's no sense in holding hearings on this bill now. We had elaborate and lengthy hearings in 1935 on the measure, and nothing has happened since to change the opinions expressed then. Hearings are absolutely unnecessary now."

Calls Plan "Ridiculous."

Representative Sam D. McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, approved the plan to hold hearings, terming the Ludlow amendment "utterly ridiculous" and predicting that the discharge petition never would get the necessary 218 names. He added:

"Hearings would prove that this referendum idea, while attractive at first sight, would be likely to plunge the country into civil war as well as foreign war."

Farouk's Cousin Weds.

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—Prince Said Halim, 35-year-old second cousin of Egypt's King Farouk, and the Countess Blanche Louise Marika Posse, 19, of Sweden, were married at Caxton Hall today.

Students Refuse Headmaster Plea, Continue Strike

Port Deposit, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—Tome Institute students, striking against the ousting of Headmaster C. J. Keppel, today refused Dr. Keppel's own plea to return to classes.

The students held a chapel meeting this morning and heard the headmaster, who returned from New York after the strike broke out. They cheered him, but voted to continue the two-day-old strike.

Meanwhile, some of the older boys, in the college preparatory department, led the juniors outside and tried, with varying success, to escort them to classes.

Fitch said the vote to continue the strike was unanimous among the 182 boys. The strikers also pledged themselves to stay on the campus and observe all school rules except those covering class attendance.

The trustees asked Dr. Keppel to resign at the end of the school year, but they did not say why. Dr. Keppel said he had not been told why his resignaton was asked.

India to Go Dry.

Bombay, India, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Central Provinces Government introduced today an elaborate bill designed to wipe out bootlegging.

It was in line with the decision of provincial governments to introduce antiliquor legislation as part of Mahatma Gandki's program of a dry India within three years.

Are your Ears sensitive to APPLAUSE?

The face of JACK BUCHANAN
Popular Musical Comedy Star

A singing-dancing-directing star who not only possesses ears sensitive to applause, but who knows the way to win it. Co-starring this season with Evelyn Laye and Adele Dixon in the Shubert musical play "Between the Devil" by Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz, he is greeted nightly in packed houses by storms of applause!

Ears Sensitive to Applause

Pale in color—set low, well back on the head and snugly against it. They stand in an upright position, as opposed to the frequently seen type which slopes backward. Although of generous proportions, they would not be classed as large, but are distinguished for their length rather than their size...being as long as or slightly longer than the nose. The lobes are full and fleshy—especially marked for their length.

Your ears will hear plenty of applause, when you serve your guests drinks made with the famed "double-rich" Kentucky straight Bourbon!

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Correspondent Wants Ill-Mated Parents Told That Divorce Sometimes Is Best for Children.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The couple I am about to speak of are distantly related to me and I know them well. Because I believe they, as parents, are doing a great wrong to their child by remaining together, I am writing to ask your opinion in the matter. During 15 years of marriage their only mutual interest has been their daughter, who is nearly 13 years old. They adore her.

* * * *

The wife is a charming person and quite intelligent. The husband is unusually bright. However, neither omits any opportunity to humiliate the other in the presence of outsiders. Apart, they are lovely individuals. Together, they are bitter and filled with hate. Remaining together only for the sake of their daughter, they do not realize that their eternal bickering is probably the greatest wrong they could do her. She is a perceptive youngster and it is not unlikely when she reaches maturity that her attitude toward marriage may be strongly affected by the memory of her parents' twisted lives. Don't you agree?

* * * *

Neither religious conviction nor financial necessity keeps this couple together. There is no physical basis to their marriage. Their reluctance to separate is founded on a desire not to hurt their child. Yet I wonder if it is not more than that. Probably they foresee the difficulties of readjustment should they separate. It is my belief that if they truly loved the child, they would have the courage to meet the separate new life each would have to build after parting.

* * * *

I reiterate—both of them adore the daughter. Since neither wishes to give her up, wouldn't a "joint custody" decree solve the problem? I hope you will discuss this problem so that other parents whose history coincides with this will realize that divorce is sometimes the better solution. Very truly yours, M. C.

Debatable Theory.

DEAR M. C.: Since both parents adore the child, it is highly likely the child in turn adores both parents, and therefore I wonder if it wouldn't work a terrific hardship upon her to have to give either up, particularly at this most trying time of her beginning adolescence? You suggest "joint custody," which would mean dividing the child back and forth between two parents situated in different homes, as the happy solution of the tense domestic situation which currently prevails. But I doubt that such arrangement would make a child of her age any happier than the present arrangement. In fact, I am inclined to believe it would make her a great deal more unhappy. And in addition to making her more miserable, it would almost inevitably result in her being badly spoiled, for the reason that such parents would find it hard to discipline her for her own good when she came to either after a period of residence with the other. Each would fear losing ground to the other in her affections; for it is very evident that that love of her which keeps them together while grinding their teeth at each other is far more selfish than otherwise. Separation could not change their essential character.

* * * *

It is to be deplored that, having decided to remain together for the child's sake, they haven't the decency to live on civilized terms with each other. Reduced to its essence, the child's misfortune is not that her parents haven't the wisdom to do the generous thing by each other and their offspring—be that thing separation, self-control or what-have-you—but that she should have been born of two such greedy people. Having lived under the same roof with them this long, so that the most impressionable period of her life has already passed, the fact that she must remain a few years more, until her formal schooling is finished, probably won't make a great deal of difference in her character. The instinctive attitude she is to take toward marriage in maturity has already been determined. Whether her parents separate or not, her only salvation will be found in her own deliberate efforts to establish a normally optimistic and co-operative attitude toward marriage, as the time approaches for her to embark on this adventure into adult living.

M. H.

What to Wear?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is proper wear to a White House tea? Would a woolen suit of the dressmaker type, fur-trimmed, be suitable? Or would a simple afternoon dress made of silk be more appropriate? Also, does one leave one's calling card—or is the card of admission all that is needed? I have consulted Emily Post, but she takes so much knowledge for granted that I am still very doubtful. Please answer before December 10. Sincerely,

DOUBTFUL.

* * * *

DEAR DOUBTFUL: You would be appropriately dressed in either the dressmaker suit or the simple silk dress. As a wrap you may wear either a fur coat or a fur-trimmed cloth coat, or any other type of daytime winter wrap other than sports or country wear. At all daytime social functions in Washington, such as luncheons, teas, cocktail parties, matinees, lectures, musicales, and so on, it is customary to wear tailored or dressmaker suits or street-length dresses. No special exception is made for the White House. The one error to guard against in Washington, apparently, is the possibility of appearing overdressed at daytime gatherings. Since you will be presenting a card of admission at the door in entering the White House, it will not be necessary to leave a calling card. M. H.

Day and Night Toppings From the Resort Scene

Slashed Crown Proves Popular Resort Style

Hats Follow Upsweeping Coiffure Movement This Season.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

REGARDLESS of the numerous interpretations in cruise and resort millinery, the silhouette in every case is built around the coiffure which emphasizes the new upsweeping movement; usually exposing the back and sides of the head. Noted in the popular hat shapes in this realm, which are a forerunner of spring chapeaux, are cartwheels, coiffure brims, bowl bretons, turbans, berets, off-the-face brims, bandanas (hats, not handkerchiefs) and pillboxes which tie under the chin.

Straws in their natural colorings, fine-sewn braids, novelty and rough-textured braids, suede and felt, all manipulated with clever technique, appear in smart versions. The white hat, perhaps, leads the color parade for resort wear, although the natural-to-toast range, because of the importance of rustic straws, also is much in evidence. Vibrant color tones have taken the place of pale pastel tints in the majority of cases, with such gay shades as capucine, cherry red, brilliant blues, green and bright yellow. This trend accents the vogue for chic contrasts rather than monotone costumes.

Something new under the Southern sun this season will be the slashed crowns rather than the open affairs of last summer; the slashing manipulated with subtlety. Brims are larger than ever and have a tendency toward height, contrasting with low and sometimes rather flat crowns; they are designed, however, for wearability and aim to flatter the wearer as well as add swank to her resort ensemble. Trimmings include flowers, plaided and velvet ribbons, chiffon streamers, feather fantasies, fruits and ingenious uses of veils, including the return of the old-time snood.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

The Thyroid Gland.

It must occur to anybody who thinks of the manifold activities of any human body that a central correlating force is necessary. A body is much like a highly organized modern city—the people walking through the streets on their various tasks can be represented by the blood cells; the telephone wires resemble the nerve fibrils which carry communications between every cell; the body has a water works which cleanses its organs and carries away waste products. Etcetera, etcetera. I need not carry the simile any further.

But, at any rate, we know that the kidneys are the actual spot where excretion takes place, and we know that they control it by their internal mechanism, just as the sanitary and hydraulic engineer of the city controls the water supply and the disposal of waste. But what controls the whole thing? Who is the mayor and the common council?

Modern research seems to point to the fact that the thyroid gland is probably more responsible than anything else. Unless it is the pituitary gland. Thyroid and pituitary together, let is say. But it is worth while to study the functions of the thyroid.

This small bit of tissue carries with it the most enormous potentialities for anybody's life. It secretes the chemical into the blood stream which controls weight and growth, appetite, emotions, muscular action and a number of other things. We have learned about this partly by isolating the cehemical and injecting it into animal bodies and noting the physiologic changes that occur, but principally we have learned about it because the thyroid is subject to diseases, and in some cases the secretion is increased and in some cases it is decreased.

When it is increased, cases of thyrotoxicosis, sometimes accompanied by goiter, and a number of effects can be noted. For instance, the question of weight which was described as long ago as 1893 by Friedrich Muller. He said that there was a paradoxical weight loss in the face of increased food, and he concluded from that that there must be an increased rate of tissue breakdown in thyroid intoxication.

Art of Giving Food Glamour Revealed

Restaurant Men Show New Tricks in Garnishing.

By Jean Green.

HOW to make food appeal to the eye as well as the palate is being demonstrated here this week by men whose business it is to make the public hungry. Housewives who are often unable to "sell" their wares to the members of their family could learn much by attending the Regional Restaurant Convention, in session at the Mayflower Hotel.

For instance, here is how the restaurateurs garnished their meats: In the case of fish, the whole fish was prepared for serving, and baby shrimps used to form colorful vertebrae. Whole hams were garnished with red and white stars made from red pimiento and egg whites. A chicken and pheasant were really a creation. Both had been glazed with gelatin. In preparing the chicken, the bones had been removed and the chicken covered with a thick gelatin covering and decorated by use of a pastry tube.

If you are used to serving gelatin in cubes and molds, then use this new technique and press the gelatin through a vegetable ricer. It comes to the table in sparkling granules that look like frosted sugar.

Pie With Figs.

As for pie, have you ever thought of serving it with slices of crystallized figs encircling the edge and the center filled with spun sugar? Or serving dainty tea cakes in cornucopias? These are all ways that the restaurateurs recommend for increasing eye appeal.

Several new food items were introduced at the convention. There was a pumpkin pie whose aroma suggested baked pies fresh from the oven. Instead of using crab shells for the deviled crab, one exhibit featured pastry shells that could be filled and French fried to a golden crispness.

Frozen foods made an impressive display at several booths. One featured the loose pack and the other standardized cartons of fruits and vegetables. Frozen apples are a new item. These frozen apples make delicious pies and can also be used for apple cake, tarts and turnovers. Their advantage lies in the fact that they do not discolor or shrivel during baking. Other fruits are raspberries, blackberries, strawberries, blueberries, and fresh orange juice. Vegetables now available are asparagus, green beans, broccoli, corn on the cob, lima beans, peas, spinach, hubbard squash and wax beans. Restaurant keepers like them because they need no preparation and need only be thawed and heated before serving.

Greener Peas.

To make the color of canned peas more attractive, one packer is coloring them artificially. These have been on the market too short a time as yet to judge as to their popularity. They can be purchased in both large and small cans.

From now on do not let the remarks of friend husband influence you in using the can opener to prepare short-order menus. The restaurateurs seem to find choice canned foods a necessity. Their variety comes from the many different types of each vegetable packed. In corn, for example, there was golden bantam kernel, whole white kernel corn, cream corn, Maine style, shoe peg, cream golden bantam, country gentleman and corn on the cob. Eight types of peaches are sold with a different use in mind.

As for desserts, the restaurant keepers have a pie calendar and a dessert calendar that would be of great help to housewives in menu-planning. For each month in the year the pies and desserts most appealing to the average palate are classified. For December there are 12 different kinds of pie.

'Fussy Feminine' Trend Comes Back

Paris, (U.P.).—Girls who like to wear fussy, ultra-feminine clothes for evening wear will have every opportunity to do so this winter. It's the time for glistening and slinky satins, rustly taffetas and soft, feminine nets.

Evening gowns are styled with full, flowing skirts. Some affect tight bodices and a tiny suggestion of hoops in the flared skirt. Others cling to the Empire silhouette idea, with close-fitting lines molded to the figure.

Many of the gowns fashioned of net show skirts which are completely ruffled. A few feature the pannier extension at the hipline, a flattering departure for those with slim hips. Black and white are especially effective color choices in this material, with pastels also good.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE DIFFERENCE between the plain and the distinguished woman is more apt to be a matter of posture than of good looks. Women who go on the theory that "walk like a duchess and you will be treated like one" are usually accepted at their own values. I could name at least six actresses who would not be so devastating were it not for their superb bearing.

The first thing about walking like a duchess is to walk as tall as you possibly can. You should pull up with the tummy muscles, up with the diaphragm, up with your chest and up with the top of the head. In other words—up!

Slump Affects Figure.

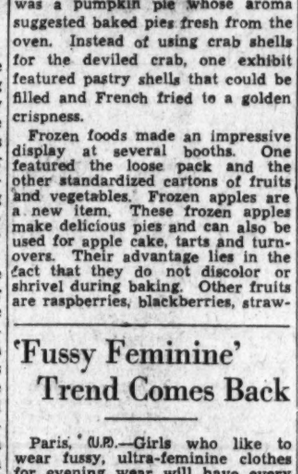
With slumped posture no figure is lovely. The small girl appears insignificant, the stocky girl looks dumpy, and the tall girl looks as though she were apologizing for her height.

Test your posture against the wall. Stand facing the wall so that the toes and chest are against it. If you touch anywhere else your posture is out of line. Not even the most patrician nose should touch—if it does, that means you poke your head forward. And if the tummy touches, this indicates toneless abdominal muscles and a sway back.

To turn this posture test into an exercise, contract the lower abdominal muscles by pulling up with them, and at the same time pull your head away from the wall. This exercise strengthens the muscular girdle and the muscles holding the head erect. Incidentally, it pulls the hips in where they belong.

Exercise Described.

This is all very well as far as it goes, but you cannot maintain an erect posture unless the muscles are strengthened in the correct positions. And that takes exercise. Here is an all-inclusive exercise that counteracts the common posture defects—forward head and neck, rounded shoulders, protruding tummy and sway back.



These exercises will improve your posture.

POSITION: Sitting erect on a low stool holding a wand—just cut the back off one of your dining room chairs and the handle off your broom!

MOVEMENT: Grasping the broomhandle with the hands near each end, raise the stick high overhead, and at the same time raise one leg until it is straight out from the hips. Hold the leg in this position as you tip the chin up and lower the wand back to the shoulders. As the wand is returned to starting position, lower the leg. Repeat 15 times, alternating the legs.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

I MENTIONED THE arrival of Dressmaker Schiaparelli the other day, and how the fashion section of our town rolls out the red plush carpet and uncorks the wine for these big shots of style from over the water. Not only has Schiap been put over the local hurdles, but now Jacques Heim, the terrific coutourier from the same capital, is here getting the same treatment.

ALICE HUGHES.

Heim is the young man who has an uncanny sense of what American women will like and wear. Among his many feats, in recent years, has been making the fur coat a supple and graceful garment, introducing the dinner suit to evening wear and making swim suits out of the printed exoticisms of the South Seas. And since this is his first visit, the social bouncing around he is getting would wear out a regiment of tough troops, let alone a quiet needle-and-thread man from Paris.

Though it may seem presumptuous, I can't help pitying such people as Schiaparelli and Heim once they are at our tender mercies. All they want is a quick and quiet look-see at the American scene which they do so much to dress. What they really get, at the hands of their local promoters, is a social program to daunt the world's greatest diner-out. Day after day they see the same few hundred faces in the fashion business—after two days of this Schiap seemed to me to be worn and bored to a good old frazzle. As for poor Heim, I have been invited to a luncheon, tea or dinner for the man every single day this week, and if he lives through it all he will be tough stuff indeed.

Of course, all this public adulation may be good for their business, but it probably completely ruins their digestions and nervous systems. Heaven help the famous dressmaker when he or she gets among the wolves of New York!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Christmas bells are literally ringing out on Fifth avenue these days, and drawing bigger crowds than would a display of the most magnificent merchandise. One inspired store filled an entire window with huge golden bells which sway gently all day—and then wired it for sound by running an endless record of bell-ringing that can be heard a block. And crowds actually stand there gaping at the bells, and listen to their music!

* * * *

Talking to the flier, Viola Gentry, the other day, she told me that in her opinion Amelia Earhart is not dead at all, but is existing on some coral stoll in those distant seas. Seems impossible to me—but how wonderful if it could be true!

* * * *

It is classic everywhere that big hotels lose enormous amounts of their silver to souvenir seekers, but did you ever realize that they get a lot in return? I didn't, until our Waldorf-Astoria told me. It seems that great numbers of cutlery pieces turn up each year from other hotels, restaurants or even hospitals which are returned to their proper owners as fast as possible. This is a very strange thing indeed, and I can't figure it out at all.

This column appears daily and Sunday.

Envoy of Poland Host At Outstanding Dinner

French Charge Honors First Secretary on Departure for San Francisco; Other Diplomatic Affairs Speed Up Social Calendar.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Moving along leisurely through most of the autumn, the partying calendar within the last few days has increased in speed until now—with Christmas in the offing—the full-fledged social season is sweeping upon the Capital in a crescendo of events.

HOPE R. MILLER.

As usual the diplomatic corps is very much in the picture, with dinners, dances and cocktail parties being given by and for its members centering the spotlight.

One of the outstanding dinners of the week was given last evening at the Polish Embassy with the Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, as host. This was the last big affair at which he will entertain before leaving December 15 to spend Christmas with Countess Potocka and their son at the Potocki estate in southern Poland.

According to present plans, the Ambassador and his family will return to Washington in time for the diplomatic dinner at the White House January 13.

Among guests attending last evening's dinner were the British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay, the Minister of Rumania, Charles A. Davila; the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senator Joseph Guffey, the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti, the First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Herbert Sholz, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover and Robert Coe.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT in the way of cocktail parties was given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton. There were almost twice as many men as women. There were enough chairs for everybody to sit down. There wasn't a single stiff person or stuffed shirt in the whole lot.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Miss Marjorie Roberts, of England, was guest of honor. On a pleasure trip in this country, she said she was truly amazed at the warm hospitality of Americans. Miss Roberts plans to be here until Tuesday, when she will go to Boston to visit friends.

MANY MEMBERS of Capital society are dropping in for a second look at the Sesquicentennial exhibition now on at the Corcoran Art Gallery. Yet few of them have any idea of the enormous amount of hard work which it took to get this ready. Mrs. McCook Knox, who was in charge of arrangements, stayed up practically all night several times before the opening putting things in order. She traveled thousands of miles unearthing certain of the pictures, many of which had never been shown before. The amusing, chromo-like picture of Benjamin Franklin, worked in wool from an old engraving, Mrs. Knox picked up on a motor trip through New England last summer.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tells of Burning Post-Midnight Oil While Writing, as D. C. Pen Women Honor Her

Many Other Successful Authors Attend Tea at Hotel Studio.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Eleanor Roosevelt Roosevelt, the League of American Pen Women's most distinguished member, was honored at a tea given by her fellow pen women of the District branch yesterday in their studio at the Grafton Hotel. She was introduced by Miss Marguerite Merigold, the branch president, by the name she signed when she became a member a few years ago—not an honorary but an active member, qualified through her success as a writer.

It was of her experiences in burning after-midnight oil to do her writing that she told members of the league in a short informal talk following Miss Merigold's introduction. She did her best writing on the train during the campaign, because that was the only quiet place she found, she said, and, at the White House, often writes until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, because that was the only quiet time. She amused the pen women by confiding that she had often wished she could write fiction, because she could tell so many true stories which couldn't be told with names of real persons attached to them.

Asked as to where she found ideas for her writing, Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she found them everywhere, even in the conversations of children.

The First Lady wore a tunic frock of dubonnet crepe, with a stitched flower design at the neck and around the hem of the tunic. Her smart black hat was turned up in front and faced with black velvet. She wore a necklace of pearls and a corsage of the Eleanor roses (named for her), which was presented by Mrs. W. W. Scott, in behalf of the branch.

Miss Merigold wore a dubonnet velvet dress with short puffed sleeves, trimmed with a design of gold leaves, and a velvet hat to match. Her corsage also was of Eleanor roses. Others receiving were Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, president of the national league, who wore a gunmetal lame gown trimmed with a deep cape of fringe in back; Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, first vice president, who wore brown lace, and Miss Phronsie Marsh, second vice president, who wore a black costume.

The Book Fair of the District Branch of the League, which opens tomorrow for two days, provided the setting for the tea. Both books and their authors were there as Mrs. Louis Shapiro gave an exhibition of bookbinding.

Among the authors of the league whose books were displayed, Mrs. Roosevelt, of course, headed the list with "This Is My Story." Also present were Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, author of "Mrs. Copeland's Guest Book;" Rose Robinson Cohen, creator of colorful visual speech drill charts for children which were on display; Dr. Mary Meek Atkinson Moore, coauthor of "Pioneering in Agriculture;" Bess Heath Olmstead, "Pennsylvania and Other Poems;" Ivy Lindsley, "What Matter, Time Or Tide;" Dora E. Baker, whose lovely poem on "Friendship" will be sold at the fair; Henrietta Heron, "Life's Crosses;" Florence E. Marshall, "Are You Awake," and Katharine Kennedy Everett, "Music of Morning."

Mrs. Mary Pickens Opie also was there and sang two of her songs, "Hollyhocks," which was awarded the prize of the Alabama State Federation of Music Clubs last summer, and a little Irish song. Miss Ida Hoyt Chamberlain played throughout the afternoon, and also sang her beautiful "Saviour King."

Miss Myrta Ethel Cawood, who was among the guests, was obliged to hurry off for the broadcast for the preservation of Decatur House, sponsored by the Professional Writers Club, of which she is president.

Pouring tea during the affair were Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, Bess Heath Olmstead, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, national parliamentarian; Mrs. Theodore Tiller, Miss Nellie Irish and Lily R. Hunt, first national vice president.

Also assisting were Rose Robinson Cohen, Mattie Richards Tyler, Margaret Jean Bailey, Marie Medora (Mrs. Arthur J. Paterson), all dressed as owls, the Pen Women's insignia. Minnie Edson Briggs acted as Mrs. Roosevelt's personal page.

Among others present were Mrs. Richard R. Farr, of Fairfax, sister of Miss Merigold; Dr. Jean Stephenson, who presented Mrs. Roosevelt's name at the time she became a member of the branch, and Mrs. William Walton Badgley, who had the honor of indorsing her; officers of the national league, including Miss Mabel Pittle, Miss Ruby Nevins, Mrs. Mary Taft and Mrs. Matilda Kolb Bartlett; Mrs. Emma N. V. Triepel, a founder; Miss Frances Youngblood, Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, Mrs. Robert Delafield Rands, Louise Worden, president of the Chevy Chase branch, which is having a tea and musicale on Saturday, and Mrs. Helen Sherry Rhodes.

Eva Sikelianou To Speak Here

Delphic Festival Expert Will Be Guest of Arts Club in D. C.

Mme. Eva Sikelianou, who, with her husband, Angelo Sikelianos, distinguished Greek poet and philosopher, was responsible for reviving the ancient Delphic festival, will come to Washington to be a guest at the Arts Club over the week-end and will speak there Sunday night on "Greek Music and Greek Architecture and Their Relation to the Drama."

Preceding her talk, Mme. Sikelianou will be guest of honor at a chafing-dish supper at which Mrs. Louise G. Caldwell and Paul W. Murphy will be hosts. Other honor guests will be the Minister of Greece, Demetrios Sicilianos, and Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Mme. Sikelianou and her husband, in reviving the festival at Delphi, did so with absolute fidelity to the original spirit of the ceremony, reviving at the same time the primitive music and creating costumes such as were made then—all woven by hand by Mme. Sikelianou, a task requiring nearly three years. The costumes, each a work of art, were displayed at the Metropolitan Museum in New York last winter. Mme. Sikelianou has been asked by the Greek government to return to Greece to prepare for the festival to be presented in 1940.

Among members of the Arts Club who will attend her lecture will be from the drama department, Maud Howell Smith, chairman; Ann Ives, Marie Moore Forrest, Carolyn McKinley Ashbrook, Marie Walcott, Wilma Wright Flood, Dorothy Winchole, Sibyl Baker, Mrs. Belle Howell Bohn, Elizabeth G. Clark, Helen B. Goodhue, Mrs. Edna Ellis Hilton, Maurice Jarvis, Mrs. Ethel Hoffman Kane, Lilla S. La Garde, Harold Allen Long, Mrs. R. B. Patterson, Mrs. Charles S. Piggot, Herman P. D.C. Girls Attended High School Before Boys Could, Zonta Told

Mrs. Doyle Tells How in 1876 Young Women Were Sent to Advanced Class for First Time; Urges Vocational Training for Many.

Girls were offered higher education in the District of Columbia before it was open to the boys, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, told the Zonta Club in an address at its weekly luncheon yesterday in the Y. W. C. A. In 1876, girls deemed fitted to go beyond the eighth grade were placed under one teacher in an advanced grammar school and they did so well that a similar school was started for the boys the following year, she said. Not until 1880 did the District have its first high school.

Mrs. Doyle reviewed interesting history in connection with the schools of Washington, as a preface to her discussion of what is now being done throughout the city school system for its 93,000 pupils.

There were about 100 in the first school, which was started in 1807 at 1700 Eye street, she said. The city was paid $100 for the land and used the money to build an iron fence around the Capitol. Funds for the maintenance of the school were derived from private contributions, taxes on slaves and dogs and licenses on carriages, hacks and taverns selling wines and liquors.

A school called Lancasterian Western School was established July 30, 1821, in a stable which was the property of Thomas Jefferson, at the corner of Fourteenth and G street, the present location of Hahns Shoe Store. It remained there 61 years.

Mrs. Doyle urged the Zonta Club's interest in such progressive steps in school service as home instruction by special teachers for children who are crippled and unable to attend at all or who are ill over a long period; physical examinations for all children, and emphasis on vocational training. A drawback in the field of vocational education is the general attitude that it is more elegant to earn one's living by one's head than by his hands, said Mrs. Doyle, and this notion must be corrected in order that education in vocations may expand and serve its full usefulness.

Soroptimists Pick Officers

The president of the Soroptimist Club, Miss Daisy Reed, presided yesterday at the final business meeting of her administration when she called to order the session at which the new officers were elected for the coming year.

The new officers will be installed at a banquet to be held in the small ballroom of the Willard January 8, of next year.

The meeting yesterday included reports by chairmen of standing committees including Mrs. Elva McNamara, chairman of the civics committee; Mrs. Constance Jones, finance; Mrs. Goode, budget; Miss Ruth Smith, attendance; Mrs. Eva Turner, fellowship; Miss Helen Barnhart, membership; Miss Lily Tyser, auditing committee; Miss Marjorie Webster, program; Mrs. Claudia Brown, social; Miss Florence Meara, Venture Club, and Miss Emma A. Georgetown U. to Have Interfraternity Ball

After a lapse of several seasons, the Georgetown interfraternity ball will again be added to the Washington fall social calendar. The council has completed plans for the affair tomorrow night at the Shoreham and expects to make the ball one of the season's brilliant affairs, Georgetown's only contribution until late winter.

As has been the custom in the past, the decorations will carry out the Christmas motif.

The sponsors and chaperons will be drawn from the business, political and educational fields of Washington, as well as the alumni of the following fraternities of the foreign service, law, medical and dental schools which comprise the council. The fraternities are the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi, Delta Phi Epsilon, Gamma Eta Gamma, Delta Chi, Theta Kappa Psi, Lambda Phi Mu, Phi Delta, Phi Delta Epsilon and Phi Chi.

Librarian Will Discuss Modern Trend in Books

Change in books for children since the war and the trends such books now are following will be discussed by Miss Dorothy Smith, superintendent of the schools department of the Queensboro Public Library, Greater New York, at the Cleveland Park Club, Thirty-third place and Highland place, tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. The meeting is under auspices of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters.

Miss Smith, who has been a lecturer at the University of California and Columbia University, will explain the importance of intelligent parents knowing about children's books and will set forth certain standards by which these books may be judged. There will also be a comprehensive exhibit of children's books at the meeting.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

A SERVICE BALL in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel will open the season for the Missouri State Society Saturday night, December 18. Missourians who are officers in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard and their wives will be guests of honor.

In other seasons the society has honored officers of various branches of the service at separate parties, but this year there will be the one big dance in honor of them all.

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of Senator Clark, is chairman of the reception committee, assisted by Mrs. Clyde Williams and Mrs. John J. Cochran and Mrs. Richard N. Duncan, wife of Representative Duncan, is chairman of the floor committee. The officers of the society are Dr. O. F. Reed, president; Senator Harry S. Truman, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser and Representative Orville Zimmerman, vice presidents; Craig Reddish, secretary, and W. W. Badgley, treasurer.

• • • •

AND ALSO there's the Mississippi State Society's party tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel, celebrating the 120th anniversary of Mississippi's admission to the Union. Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of Jackson, is president, and two other officers are from the same city. They are Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, who is a vice president, and Mrs. Sue Fite Ramsey, the historian.

• • • •

AND, while we're on the subject of State societies—a subject as broad as the United States is long—there's the annual Christmas dance of the Massachusetts group next Wednesday also at the Wardman Park. Mrs. Leon Chagnon, secretary, is in charge of guest tickets.

• • • •

THEN there is the annual cider festival of the West Virginia State Society to be held next Thursday night at the Raleigh Hotel. Miss Jackie Sammons, formerly of Parkersburg, will give an entertainment—a talented young lady who has entertained for organizations throughout the State. Apples, cider and ginger bread, straight from West Virginia will be served, Col. J. William DeGrange, chairman of the committee has announced.

New officers of the society will be installed too, headed by David S. Davison, legal adviser of the Retirement Division of the Civil Service Commission, who is president.

THE TURQUOISE is the birthstone for many of the national sororities, judging from the founders' days which are being celebrated this month. Just last night Alpha Omicron Pi, national women's fraternity, celebrated with a dinner at the chapter house in College Park, Md. Alpha Omicron Pi was founded at Barnard College in 1887 by Helen St. Clair Mullen, Stella George Stern Perry, Elizabeth Haywood Wyman and Jessie Wallace Hughan. The active chapter and pledges at College Park and the Washington and Baltimore, alumnae chapters are joined for the first time to celebrate. Miss Muriel James is president of the active chapter, Mrs. Joseph Howard, president of the Baltimore alumnae, and Miss Alma Blandford, newly elected president of the Washington alumnae chapter, succeeding Miss Anita Peters, who is now on an extended European tour.

• • • •

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Beta Sigma Omicron will observe its 49th founders' date with a tea at the studio of the D. C. branch of the National League of American Pen Women, at the Grafton Hotel, from 4 to 6. Mrs. Oliver Martin Spencer, of Cloud Seine -et-Oise, France, one of the founders, will be guest of honor. She arrived in the United States only a few days ago and came directly to Washington for the founders' day celebration.

• • • •

Mrs. Carl Girou, Washington Alumnae president, will head the receiving line with the guest of honor. Others who will receive with them will include Mrs. Robert Mason DeShazo, Miss Elizabeth Mann, Mrs. Judson Cobb, Mrs. Henry Lyon, Miss Peggy Buchanan, Miss Mattie Richards Tyler, Mrs. Clarence Cannon, Miss Veryl Schult and Miss Gertrude Kinsley.

There will be a program of music and poetry by Inez Sheldon Tyler, vice president of the D. C. Pen Women and editor of the Blue Moon, and Miss Ida Hoyt Chamberlain, chairman of music for the Pen Women. Miss Hilda Nelson, Miss Schult and Miss Tyler. Miss Chamberlain will give two of her compositions, "Savior King" and "To Your Song," the words of which were written and dedicated to her by Miss Tyler.

• • • •

AND THEN, Wednesday night, the three active chapters of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, will join with the Eta Alumnae Chapter in celebration of Founders' Day for that organization which was started in Illinois in 1908. There will be a dinner at Lee House at which Miss Elizabeth Reed, grand dean, and Mrs. Grace B. Stiles, grand registrar, both Washingtonians, will speak, Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, dean of Province 2, will preside and the program will include skits by all of the chapters. Judge Ellen K. Raedy will assume her customary judicial role in deciding which of the skits is best and the winner will be awarded a prize.

• • • •

THE JUNIOR AUXILIARY of Montgomery County Hospital is presenting Miss Tatiana Gnoocheff, Russian dancer, as a feature of its charity ball tomorrow night at the Manor Country Club, Norbeck, Md. Residents of Montgomery, Howard and Prince George's Counties will be among the guests at the dance which will be preceded by many dinner parties.

• • • •

Miss Richards' Lecture Lures Many to Club

Members of the Women's City Club gathered last night at the clubhouse for the annual lecture on the trend in world affairs, presented by Miss Janet Richards, a life member of the club and dean of women lectures on current events.

Although the reservation list for the dinner preceding the program was limited to 100, many additional guests came later in the evening for Miss Richards' talk. She gave her usual keen analysis of events both in this country and in Europe and the Far East. She wore a black velvet gown and an ermine scarf.

Others at the head table, in addition to the speaker, were Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, who presided; Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, vice president of the club, who is acting president in the absence of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, now on a world tour; Judge Mary O'Toole, past president; Miss Mary Clifford, a member, who has just returned from a trip abroad, and Mrs. Thomas A. Sherman and her guest, Mrs. Taylor.

The table was decorated in keeping with the Christmas season, in a color scheme of red and white.

Among the club members who made the occasion one for entertaining and had with them parties of guests were: Miss Pearl Jencks, Miss Julia Lehmann, Mrs. William McSparren, Mrs. A. G. Dodge, Miss Mary E. Black, Mrs. Pauline Sabin and Mrs. Andrew Stewart, recently appointed art chairman of the club, who had among her guests Miss Janice Holland, whose lovely water colors now are on exhibition at the clubhouse.

SQUIRE GIFFORD'S

Hors d'Oeuvre—Chicken and Turkeys—For Hunt Breakfasts, Teas, and Holiday Parties

A whole chicken or turkey can be used as something special in the way of hors d'oeuvre at cocktail parties, teas, and hunt breakfasts. The meat is to be sliced very thin and served on sheer hot or malba toast. The dry meat has a game-like flavor.

Squire Gifford's Quansett smoked turkey and chicken are fascinating products, smoked over green hickory fires to a crisp golden brown, from an old family recipe.

Cooked and ready to serve, the birds come to you in miniature market baskets, wrapped in sparkling cellophane. Slice thinly and serve as an appetizer—or in salads—a perfect picnic dish, and a perfect hospital or sailing present.

Roper Predicts $100,000,000 Trade Balance

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Commerce Roper estimated yesterday United States exports will exceed imports this year by $100,000,000 or more.

He said he expected the total volume of foreign trade to be $6,400,000,000, an increase of 31 per cent over 1936 and 118 per cent over 1932, low year of the depression.

A $100,000,000 favorable trade balance would be three times as large as last year's.

Far East a Surprise.

Roper said improved American agricultural conditions contributed most to the better outlook. Agricultural imports have declined sharply and exports of farm produce have increased.

Another hopeful factor, the Secretary declared, is that trade with the Far East has held up "much better than might have been expected in view of the hostilities."

Although exports to China declined from $1,559,000 in September to $1,388,000 in October, shipments to the British port of Hongkong increased from $1,715,000 in September to $4,016,000 in October.

Hongkong Jammed.

He said it was apparent that many American goods formerly shipped directly to China now are being routed through the British possession, which has been China's principal source of supply since the Japanese conquered Shanghai. Shipments to Hongkong, he added, are growing so fast that commercial agents report some difficulty in moving goods by that route.

Roper also revealed United States exports to Japan, which declined sharply in September, recovered in October. October shipments to Japan totaled $20,099,000, compared with $16,701,000 in September.

Roper expressed the opinion that reciprocal trade agreement negotiations with Great Britain were making substantial progress, and that he was very hopeful a treaty would result.

Heater Gas Kills 54 Wild Animals In N.Y. Menagerie

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Gas, seeping from a defective heater, killed 54 wild animals and birds Tuesday and overcome a dozen others in a lower Manhattan menagerie before a watchman discovered their plight.

A pulmotor crew, displaying considerable ingenuity at adjusting their apparatus, revived four alligators, three monkeys, an Australian emu, three red doves and an anteater.

The dead birds and animals, which included 46 monkeys, 2 gibbons, a tiger cat, a deer, 3 emus and a celebes finch, were valued at more than $4,000. An ostrich, an emu, a gibbon and several tankfuls of tropical fish showed no ill effects.

Midnight Textile Shift Is Attacked

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 8.—Branding the third shift of work beginning each midnight in the cotton textile industry "an economic monstrosity," Russell H. Leonard, head of the Pepperell Manufacturing Co., Tuesday called upon the Cotton Textile Institute to seek Congressional action outlawing the practice.

The institute is meeting in Washington, and Leonard said the purpose of a letter to the organization's president—Claudius Murchison—was to direct the attention of the present session of Congress to the third shift.

Leonard said minority groups in the North and South had made use of the third, or "graveyard," shift.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Difficult as it may be for the average American who changes his underwear once a week to believe it, a Senator or Representative at $10,000 a year is not overpaid . . . He cannot live a life of sinful luxury on his salary.

• • • •

In fact, most Congressmen have to scratch to make both ends meet, even with free haircuts and shampoos . . . Sometimes it seems a long time between paydays at the Capitol. Fortunate are the small town members who don't try to keep up with the Joneses.

• • • •

First of all, a Representative usually spends well over $1,000 a year for campaign purposes, directly or indirectly, sometimes without realizing it; for a Representative's re-election is his first thought and the first item on his budget.

"—a Member must shell out"

This may take any form from oversize gifts to charity to buying a dozen tickets to the policemen's ball . . . And it is in addition to a great deal of unavoidable entertaining, both at home and in Washington, of deep political significance.

• • • •

And entertaining in Washington is no niggardly item. A little dinner for six at $2 a plate has a way of blossoming into a dinner for 12 with several dozen highballs at 50 cents each.

When this happens several times a month it cuts quite a dent in the $833.33 stipend.

I'd guess than even prudent, frugal Congressmen spend $1,000 a year for entertainment beyond what they'd spend if they weren't among the anointed . . . Many of them, of course, spend a great deal more, while some, of course, are too deeply immersed in problems of state to be aware when the waiter brings the check.

• • • •

Also, many Congressmen are compelled to maintain establishments both at home and in Washington, for a large part of each year, which is ferociously expensive, with a substantial hotel or apartment bill mounting at one end and rent or taxes and household expenses continuing at the other.

All this time there are usually children growing up and requiring an education, and if the member succumbs to the temptation to bring them and the missus to the Capital and give them the cosmopolitan advantages of Washington, he must dig down in his jeans for railroad fare and other expenses . . . The school curricula, the sessions and the semesters don't jibe . . . His lavish mileage allowance doesn't much more 'han cover their trips back and forth, even when he plays it cagey. The extra thousand or so which members from distant States finagle on mileage is a real godsend.

• • • •

A Congressman's wife is human, and if she goes to Washington parties she must hold up her end with the wives of the more prosperous members, and that means a few hundred a year more for frocks, accessories and beautification than she would spend at home.

• • • •

All the while there's the endless worry about re-election, the interminable need to reconcile his position with a dozen diverse factions and hundreds of clamorous individuals . . .

He has a lot of fun, he enjoys perhaps an inordinate sense of power and importance, but he suffers from a lot of heartburn and the shakes, too.

• • • •

They often wonder whether the game is worth the candle; no repose, no assurance of tenure, a big headache every two years; and it's no wonder that quite a few resign every session, while more and more retire quite willingly to the comparative opulence and peace of a smaller income in the old home town.

Don't Sample Toy Horns in Stores, Ruhland Warns

Christmas toy shoppers were warned against "sampling such items as horns, mouth organs, balloons and others," by the Health Department yesterday.

Dealers who sell such articles should refuse to permit prospective buyers to test them by blowing into them before purchasing, Health Officer George C. Ruhland stated.

"Such a practice is dangerous to the prospective purchasers as well as to persons using the article later," Dr. Ruhland said. "It may be the means of spreading diphtheria, scarlet fever and influenza."

Glenn Dale Use Left Up To D.C. Heads

Opinion by Seal Upholds Right to Keep Adults in Children's Unit.

Commissioners to Make Final Decision on Matter Tomorrow.

By Gerald G. Gross

An opinion yesterday by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal placed squarely up to the District Commissioners the problem of housing adult and child tuberculars at Glenn Dale Sanatorium in separate buildings or setting aside a portion of the children's unit for adult cases.

With Seal advising that it would not be illegal to follow the latter procedure, which is advocated by Health Officer George C. Ruhland and the tuberculosis advisory committee, the Commissioners are expected to pass final judgment at their meeting tomorrow.

Yesterday there were 305 patients in the adults' building, which has a capacity of 396. All but one of the beds for white persons were filled, so if transfers from the overcrowded tuberculosis pavilion at Gallinger are to be continued, either a section of the children's building must be requisitioned or changes must be made in racial apportionment of beds.

The 300-bed children's building at Glenn Dale, which is less than one-half filled, will become one of the country's outstanding white elephants if parts of it is not turned over to men and women sufferers, it was indicated yesterday by public health authorities.

The Health Department's tuberculosis advisory committee last Saturday strongly recommended housing of the adult overflow in the juvenile ward, provided strict precautions are taken to segregate the two age groups. In upholding the legality of this plan, Corporation Counsel Seal also emphasized the necessity of keeping young patients entirely apart from their elders.

Sanatoria Originally Separate.

The Glenn Dale project originally was conceived as two separate sanatoria, one for adults, the other for children, but Dr. Ruhland placed them under unified administration shortly after the former was opened last September. The children's building has been in use for several years.

The combination plan, with grown-ups housed in the under-populated children's ward as a solution of the overflow problem, was abruptly terminated last month as a result of criticism.

"Up to the present appropriation act separate appropriations were made for the maintenance of these two hospitals," Seal said yesterday, "but in the current appropriation act a lump sum has been appropriated for maintenance of both institutions. By reason of this fact there could be no question of the illegal use of this fund in the maintenance of these two institutions.

"Nothing can be found in the act that would indicate the sanatorium was to be used exclusively as a children's hospital, but it is apparent from the working of the act that the hospital was primarily intended for treatment of tubercular children.

"The question of whether tubercular adults should be admitted to the children's hospital is a question of fact to be decided by the Commissioners, based upon determination of whether the admission of tubercular adults would in any way jeopardize the proper operation and facilities of the hospital in the treatment of children, the primary purpose for which it was constructed."

Ruhland Withholds Comment.

Dr. Ruhland withheld comment on the corporation counsel's favorable ruling pending formal action by the Commissioners tomorrow. He did cite, however, the continued difficulty of obtaining nurses for the institution.

Meantime, Glenn Dale's assistant superintendent, Dr. Daniel L. Finucane, said:

"We are not only short of nurses but the need of additional kitchen help and ward attendants is pathetic, while the four resident doctors are having to take care of three times as many patients as they should."

The four resident physicians alone must treat patients in both adults' and children's buildings, Dr. Finucane and Supt. Winthrop W. Peabody being occupied chiefly with administrative duties.

Ladies Again Win Honors at Post's Umbrella Court

Once again last evening it was "ladies night" at the sixth session of The Washington Post's "Umbrella Court of the Air" program. Two members of the fairer sex won first and second prizes of $10 and $5, respectively: Miss Mary Sourwine and Miss Mary Helen Smith.

Third award of $3 went to William A. Heilprim, and the fourth prize, $1, was divided between two contestants who tied, John Roberts and William McManes.

The next session of "Umbrella Court of the Air" will be heard at 9 p. m., next Wednesday evening over Station WMAL.

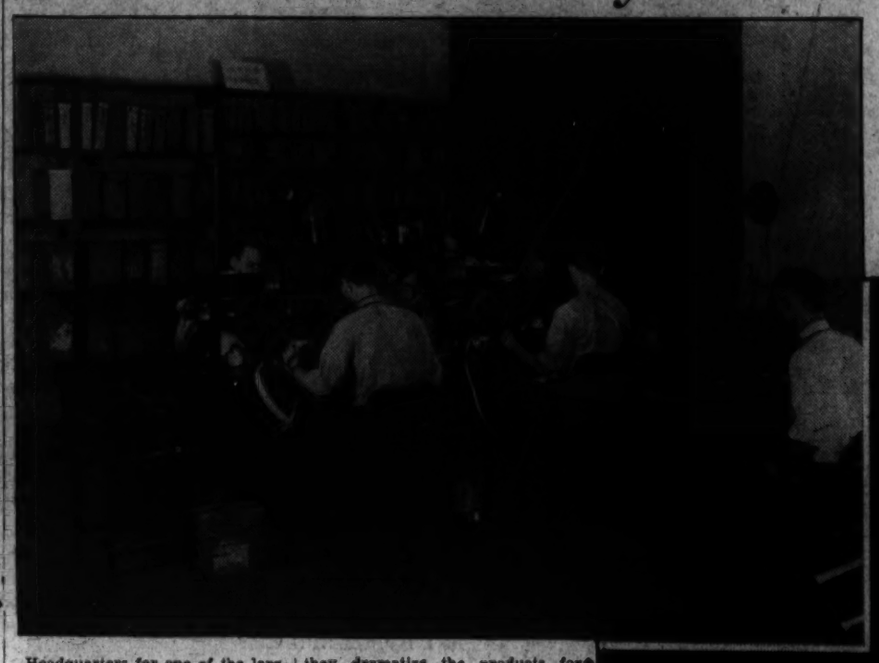
Government's Own Motion Picture Magnate Has to 'Bum' a Secretary When He Needs One



The Bureau of Mines movie distribution center handles much more business than an ordinary lending library. The clerks shown at the left are shipping some of the 180 reels they send out each day. So great is the demand that they sometimes fall three or four months behind the shipment schedule, even when 100 copies have been made of a film. Below is a scene taken in a steel plant during the filming of "The Story of Steel."

Headquarters for one of the largest educational film enterprises in the world are located in Washington, although no one ever would suspect it. They are housed in a cubicle in the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Mines. Morgan F. Leopold, producer, scenario writer and director of the pictures which 10,000,000 people will see next year, occupies the office, and he doesn't even have a stenographer.

"I have to bum one when I want to dictate a letter," he explained yesterday.

Safety engineer for the bureau, his chief job is supervision of its vast movie project. The films he directs are financed by industrial firms, photographed by commercial cameramen and released by the Bureau of Mines.

"The great cry today is for industrial films," he said. "It's well to show school children a picture of Washington crossing the Delaware, but they want something more recent."

The reels he puts out depict the stories behind coal, oil, glass and other products in everyday use. Industry is glad to spend the money for them because, while they carry no direct advertising, they dramatize the products for the public. Producers realize that Leopold can guarantee them wider distribution and more expert direction than they could obtain independently.

After a company has arranged for Leopold's services, it lets bids for the film to commercial photographers. He accompanies them to the mine or oil field where the picture is to be made and oversees their work. The completed film is returned to his Washington office, where he edits it with the advice of other Bureau of Mines engineers. The finished product is sent to the bureau's library in Pittsburgh, whence it is released to churches, schools and civic organizations who request it.

The bureau's library, the largest of its kind in the world, now includes 5,000 reels. Representing 57 different industrial fields, they were exhibited on over 100,000 occasions this year.

Right now he wants someone to finance a picture showing governmental activities—"not the AAA or any of those agencies, but the dramatic work done by the Bureau of Fisheries and conservation projects."

A graduate of George Washington University, Leopold joined the bureau as an engineer, little realizing that he was to become a film magnate.

District Urged To Use Gas for Its Executions

Official, Recommending Monoxide, Calls Death Chair Inhumane.

Substitution of the carbon monoxide chamber for the electric chair as the District's capital punishment machine was urged yesterday by a municipal official.

Requesting anonymity, the departmental administrator said carbon monoxide gas is more humane and, though it may not bring death as swiftly as high voltage, it offers early and painless unconsciousness, which ends life in "a pleasant sleep."

Although four or five States have adopted the hydrocyanic gas method of execution, none uses carbon monoxide, the colorless, odorless and tasteless gas which is discharged from an automobile's exhaust.

The officials' recommendation comes as the Bureau of the Budget is considering the District Commissioners' request for $125,000 to begin work on an addition to the District Jail which would house, besides the offices and an infirmary, the electric chairs and death cells.

There has been continual criticism for years of the practice of electrocuting capital offenders in the jail's mess hall. Prisoners lunch in the large room within an hour or two after executions, with the smell of burning flesh still in the air.

Although the architecural plans have not yet been made public, it was learned that the chair will be installed on the fourth floor of the addition, occupying a sort of penthouse. Nearby would be the cells of doomed convicts, who now occupy a part of the regular cell block as they wait to walk "the last mile." penal institutions, said the carbon

Laundry Theft Suspect Identified in Line-up

Everett Jones, 19, colored, 1900 block of Sixth street northwest, arrested in Philadelphia on a traffic charge, was identified in a lineup at headquarters last night, police said, in connection with the robbery of two Palace Laundry branches and the attempted robbery of a third. Detectives said he admitted the crimes, though no charges have been placed.

Snow Parking Ban To Be Put in Effect

The much-disputed snow-removal no-parking regulation, made binding by a recent decision of the District Court of Appeals, will go into effect on 50 miles of city streets next Wednesday.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday ordered employes of the sign shop to begin placing the signs which will prohibit parking between 2 a. m. and 8 a. m. on principal streets and avenues.

Heretofore the regulation has been termed a failure because Police Court judges have had no higher court ruling.

Several weeks ago the Appellate Court ruled that it is within the power of the District Commissioners to promulgate any parking regulation which they see fit.

Official Denies Intent to Influence Report of Study Group.

Support for a District sales tax was announced yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen as members of the Commissioners' Special Tax Committee and the Citizens' Tax Advisory Committee prepared to hold their final joint session tomorrow.

Both committees have been meeting with the Commissioners several months to prepare recommendations on the District's tax program.

"This will be the last meeting, we believe," Commissioner Hazen said, "since the recommendations must be sent to Congress before January 1."

It must be understood, however, Commissioner Hazen explained, that he is leaving to the committee final word on the type of tax it will recommend.

"Although indications are that a sales tax will be recommended," Hazen said, "I am not attempting to influence the committee in any way. I would like to see a sales tax enacted for the District; it would solve all our financial worries and we would be fixed for life."

Collins Hints Priority for K Street Viaduct

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, yesterday indicated he favors immediate construction of the K street viaduct which the Commissioners had decided not to push in the 1939 supply bill.

Today Collins and other members of the sub-committee will inspect the site of the viaduct proposed as a means of expediting suburban traffic.

Yesterday he examined the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the replacement of which has been urged by residents of Anacostia for several years, but he intimated that between the two projects, the bridge and the K street viaduct, he believes the latter should be given priority.

Training School Visited.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, several weeks ago said the Commissioners would not ask for the viaduct this year because of extension of the Lee boulevard to Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The Collins sub-committee yesterday inspected several street projects carried in 1939 budget estimates, in company with Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

The members also made a hasty visit to the National Training School for Girls, but they looked only at the exterior and did not go inside.

Dupont Underpass Up.

Among projects to be examined today is the Dupont Circle underpass, for which funds are asked in next year's budget.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, yesterday pledged his efforts to renew the fight for better working conditions for guards and matrons at the District Jail.

Upon receipt of a letter from a matron at the jail, whose name he withheld, Randolph said he would bring the matter to attention of the Civil Service Committee, of which he is a member.

Matron Complains.

The matron in her letter pointed out that jail employes now are required to work seven days a week, with no time off except 26 days annual leave. She asked for a six-day week.

"We have no Sundays or holidays off," she said, "each day throughout the year being simply another working day for the guards and matrons of the jail.

"Our work is of a dangerous nature, as people are detained here charged with every conceivable crime, and, as we must work behind bars, without an intervening day of rest, we at time become mentally and physically depressed, which causes us to become more or less mechanical.

"Often, too, with overcrowded conditions at the jail, the facilities are totally inadequate, and this tends to make our work all the more hazardous."

Rise in Crime Laid to Lax Prosecution

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Failure of District courts and prosecutors to co-operate with the Police Department was blamed by high police officials last night for recent criminal violence as detectives revealed they sought a burglar, now free on bond, in connection with an attempted safe robbery Sunday night.

Police said the suspect is James R. Steele, 31. Police wish to question him about the gang led by Carlton "Cotty" Williams, who was killed Sunday night after an attempt to rob the safe of Charles Nelson, wealthy Prince Georges County business man.

With the Washington Criminal Justice Association's recent attack on irregular bail-bond practices and delayed criminal prosecutions fresh in the minds of local authorities, it developed that members of the gang which plotted Sunday night's safe robbery in Southeast Washington were awaiting trial on long-pending charges—one of them more than a year old.

Although not willing to have their names used, several high-ranking police officials contended yesterday that Sunday night's shooting never would have occurred if efficient legal machinery had been set in motion many months ago to jail the accused gunmen for earlier offenses.

The three members of the gang—including Williams—were at liberty under long-standing bonds.

Steel has a crime record dating from 1914. Charges of carrying concealed weapons and attempted housebreaking have been pending against him since October, 1936. He was free on bond. Since the Sunday shooting the case has been "especially set" in District Court for next Monday, according to records. Steele and Williams, police said, were caught breaking into a grocery store at 2827 Georgia avenue northwest more than a year ago.

John Marshall Tabler, who surrendered Monday, "to avoid being shot," is under a $10,000 bond on charges of shooting a witness who was scheduled to testify against him in a liquor conspiracy case. Police asked that he be held in bond of $50,000 but this was refused.

Benjamin Franklin Sewell, a colored man detained after Sunday's safe robbing plot, has been arrested seven times since 1927.

Last night, officers continued to grill Paul J. Nelson, brother of Charles Nelson, who has confessed, police say, to being the "finger man" for the Williams gang in two safe-crackings.

FLAHERTY REVISES PLANS FOR GAME WITH BEARS

By Shirley Povich.

ASIDES.

To the Athletic Directors of Georgetown, G. W. U., Maryland and Catholic U.—Unless you wise up, forget your petty jealousies, and start scheduling each other, the only time you'll draw a crowd to your football games in Washington is when you play between the halves of the Redskin games.

POVICH

To Joe Turner and Goldy Ahearn: All right, try and laugh off the threat of Howard Livingston and his new Rialto fight club. Strikes me as the phoney smile of a fighter who has been hurt. Livingston already has outbid you for the services of Joey Archibald and the folks backing him have plenty of what it takes.

To George Marshall: Next time your Redskins win a glorious victory like they did in New York, why not bring 'em home first class instead of those stuffy coaches. I trust you were nice and comfy in that Pullman compartment you had.

To Clark Griffith: Nice work, that Linke for Hogsett trade. You got something for nothing there. If you give that Hogsett planty of rest he'll pitch a lot of grief at left-handed clubs like the Yankees and Indians. But don't you dare to trade Buddy Myer. That is not a question, it's a warning.

To the District of Columbia Boxing Commission—How come you let Turner and Ahearn announce that the Archibald-Gevinson winner will positively meet Petey Sarron and then let 'em ignore the promise? Start acting like a big league commission.

To Redskins' Coach Ray Flaherty—Your football players don't seem to have the same seriousness of purpose and objectivity this week that they had before the game with the Giants. There's too much kidding, too much joviality. And on Sunday in Chicago there may be too much Bears.

To National League club owners—You're letting the American League steal all the home-run thunder again by adopting the slow, heavy-covered ball. You've got a potential Babe Ruth in Ducky Medwick, but you're handicapping him with that National League mush ball.

To Maryland's Frank Dobson—That was a pretty speech you made to the Redskins at the football writers' luncheon the other day, and you had those pros hanging on your words with your spellbinding. Wise football men agree with you that the era of razzle-dazzle football is at an end.

To Tim Mara, owner of the New York Giants—You had a nerve demanding Cliff Battles and $10,000 in cash for Tuffy Leemans, even though George Marshall was aching to get Leemans. Did you read the New York papers after Sunday's game?

To the Cleveland Rams—Forget any ideas you had about getting Cliff Battles from the Redskins to coach and play with your ball club. Marshall is no longer in a trading mood, although it is true he would have swapped Battles even for Drake a month ago.

To Boston newspapers—So the Redskins moved to a "hick" town when they moved to Washington, huh?

To Whom It May Concern—The fellow who emitted a gasp and murmured "He's wonderful!" as Cliff Battles galloped 76 yards across the screen at the Trans-Lux in the films of the Redskins-Giants game was Sammy Baugh.

To Washington Football Writers—Under your noses, Georgetown and George Washington are negotiating for a renewal of their football rivalry which may provide for a game in 1938 and is certain to bring them together in 1939.

To Mickey Cochrane—Since you traded Gerald Walker and Marvin Owens to the White Sox for those three ne'er-do-wells, Clark Griffith has begun to get ideas. He's thinking of offering you Mihalic for Greenberg and Gehringer, if you'll throw in Rudy York.

To Alabama—In the Rose Bowl you'll be meeting a California teeam whose backs gain 5 yards before they reach the line of scrimmage. That's the tribute California sports writers are paying to that hard-charging Bear line.

New Ruling Bars Terps' Former Ace

Carl Hinkle Welcome, Official Says; Navy Approves Move.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Revision of the United States Military Academy's athletic eligibility code, to be effective with the start of the new year and embracing the so-called three-year varsity rule for the first time, climaxes a five-year de-emphasis program aimed especially at Army football.

Coupled with the adoption of the freshman rule ten years ago and a subsequent ban on athletic proselyting, the new policy follows a course calcuated to put West Point's standards on the same basis as those generally accepted by leading civilian colleges, as well as the Naval Academy.

Affected by the new ruling is Bill Guckeyson, former all-Southern halfback from the University of Maryland, a plebe at the academy, and Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt's all-American center, who is slated to enter next July. Guckeyson had been touted as certain to win all-American honors when he played for Army, while Hinkle was regarded as one of the most valuable linemen ever headed for the Point.

Chief effect of the new code will be to limit an athlete's varsity competition to three years in any sport, inclusive of play in college as well as at West Point. Any athlete with three years of varsity experience in any college sport, prior to entering the academy, automatically will be barred from further varsity activity in that sport. This rule will apply to cadets now enrolled here.

Heretofore the Army has not limited varsity competition for its athletes, beyond their plebe year, regardless of previous college experience.

Subject to working out the details and determining their immediate effect, the new code will be applied first to the basketball squad, which opens its season in January and, as a result of the varsity limit, may lose several players.

Transfer Rule.

The so-called "transfer rule," under which many colleges now bar transfer students from competing at all in a sport in which they engaged at another college, regardless of the length of such competition, is unlikely to be included in the new Army code. This rule is not applied by the Navy.

The "one year residence rule," in force for varsity athletics at most colleges, also is considered unnecessary here, since no one can enter West Point except as a plebe and is, therefore, barred from varsity sport for one year.

Lieut. Col. J. L. Devers, graduate manager of athletics, emphasized the new code will be worked out with the sole idea of "putting Army athletics on the highest possible plane."

"There has been nothing precipitate in our action," he added. "It is consistent with the steps already taken, as well as with standards now generally accepted in college sports."

No Pressure Exerted.

The Big Ten Conference, which last week lifted its ban against playing Army teams, was unaware of the change in Army's eligibility code before taking action, Col. Devers said.

There had been no pressure for a change, in or out of the Academy, and least of all from the Eastern "Ivy League" colleges which have effected close working relations with West Point over a period of several years.

One of the problems involved in drawing up the new code will be to define the college group to which the three-year varsity rule will be applied in its effect on West Point eligibility. It is likely junior colleges and teachers colleges will be omitted from this definition.

Navy's three-fold regulation, on this point, now specifies that the institution concerned must provide a four-year course, giving a baccalaureate degree, require 15 "Carnegie units" for entrance, and have an enrollment of at least 100 male students.

Dupre Insists Lou Tip 130

Tony Dupre wants to make sure that Lou Gevinson, the Washington southpaw, doesn't have too much weight on him for their ten-round feature match next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

And as a result Dupre, through his manager, yesterday demanded that Gevinson scale down to 130 or less by 2 o'clock the afternoon of the match.

All of this, of course, is annoying the Jewish southpaw no end, for when he had to make weight for Archibald it worked quite a hardship on him.

Dupre, New England featherweight and bantamweight champion, who has defeated Armando Sicilia and Baby Manuel in his two local appearances, promises to come in between 126 and 128.

Gevinson, who has been training daily with gym and road workouts, yesterday weighed around 133½ and is confident of shaving off the necessary poundage.

If Lou weighs more than 130 by 2 p. m., the commission will give him half an hour to "sweat out," Matchmaker Ahearn said. This "sweating out" process is not such good news to any fighter.

Colonials, Cards Pick All-Rivals

Tennessee Five Added to George Washington Schedule.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Alabama may be the Rose Bowl choice, but West Virginia had the better football team, according to a poll of George Washington's gridmen, taken yesterday. The ought to know—they lost to both teams.

But the Tide, they say, was the smartest and best coached club George Washington met all season. This is offset, however, by another statement to the effect that West Virginia could have whipped almost any team in the country Thanksgiving Day. That was the day it handed the Colonials a 26-to-0 pasting.

Johnny Busick, Colonial publicity man, gleaned this information from his boys yesterday in the course of selecting an "all-opponent" team for the season just concluded. Three Alabamans, as many from West Virginia and Arkansas, and one each from Tulsa and Mississippi, were placed on the first team.

On the first team are Benton, (Arkansas) and Shoemaker (Alabama), ends; Kinard (Mississippi) and Hodges (West Virginia), tackles; Atty (West Virginia) and Monsky (Alabama), guards; Wooddell (Arkansas), center; White (Tulsa), quarterback; Sloan (Arkansas) and Kilgrow (Alabama), halfbacks, and Audia (West Virginia), fullback.

The second team included Kincaid Mississippi) and Hamilton (Arkansas), ends; Ryba (Alabama) and Williams (Mississippi), tackles; Graham (Tulsa) and Cicone (West Virginia Wesleyan), guards; Jim On (North Dakota State), center; Hapes (Mississippi), quarterback; Clark (West Virginia) and Lenhardt (Mississippi), halfbacks, and Holm (Alabama), fullback.

"Bruiser" Kinard, Jim Benton, Joe Kilgrow and Leroy Monsky were All-America nominees, Monsky winning a berth on the Associated Press' first team. Jim On, if you recall, was the Hawaiian lad who played a whale of a game for Dakota against the Colonials in their home-coming game.

Tennessee's potent passers will appear here December 20 against George Washington's courtmen at Tech High School, Max Farrington, Assistant director of athletics, announced last night. The game finally was closed after a week of negotiations. The Volunteers will stop over here en route to New York where they are scheduled to play in Madison Square Garden.

Local Alumni Further Plan For Intercity Grid Rivalry

Graduates of George Washington, Catholic, Maryland and Georgetown Anxious to Schedule Games With Local Schools.

A movement to close the breach existing in athletics between the four major universities of this vicinity gained added momentum yesterday at a luncheon at the Raleigh Hotel attended by alumni of the institutions.

Whereas the situation was merely informally discussed at the group's initial meeting last week, a more definite program was outlined yesterday. Increased attendance indicated the unusual interest manifest in the idea by Washington alumni of the schools.

Committees were appointed to interview prominent alumni of the schools, and to organize each group in an effort to bring the matter to the attention of college authorities. Judge Edward C. Curran was appointed chairman of the Catholic University committee; Judge Walter J. Casey was named head of the Georgetown group; Robert Smith, an attorney, will head the George Washington committee, and E. F. Zalesak was appointed chairman of Maryland's committee. Zalesak, incidentally, is president of the University of Maryland General Alumni Association.

The movement, which was fostered by Clarence Bourg and Frank Buckley, local attorneys, has gained fresh supporters with each passing day, and those attending yesterday's meeting have high hopes of seeing a program whereby all four schools will meet in football and other sports. Another meeting is scheduled next Wednesday at the Raleigh.

D.C. Officials Ask Support of Charity Game

Commissioners Appeal for Variety Club Grid Tilt.

The District Commissioners yesterday appealed to all Washington citizens to lend their support to the Variety Club charity football game scheduled for December 19.

The proclamation stated:

"Whereas, the citizens of the District of Columbia have learned of the appalling condition which exists with thousands of children of the poor daily deprived of sustenance and proper clothing, and,

"Whereas, the Variety Club of Washington, together with other agencies, has offered to stage an athletic event the purpose of which is to raise funds for the alleviation of the local poor and to provide hot lunches for indigent school children, and,

"Whereas, this athletic event, to be known as the Capital Bowl Football Game to be staged at 2 o'clock in the Catholic University Stadium on Sunday, December 19, will bring together outstanding scholastic gridiron stars,

"Now, therefore, we, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, proclaim this approaching event one of timely significance that will aid materially in the fight against sickness and hunger, and in the name of humanity recommend and urge every citizen of the District to attend the Capital Bowl Football Game on Sunday, December 19, both as an outstanding sports event and because of the noble cause which makes it possible."

Rollins College To Play in Cuba

Winter Park, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP).—The Rollins College football team will play the Cuban Navy at Havana New Year's Day, college officials announced today.

The faculty athletic committee said the invitation came from representatives of the Cuban government, which will sponsor the game.

Gaiety Ends As Players Start West

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Chicago, Dec. 8. Lashed to a fighting fury by Head Coach Ray Flaherty's biting criticism of their gay mood of the past few days, it is a grim gang of Washington Redskins that is rolling toward Chicago tonight.

The laughter and the wise-cracking that set in after the Redskins' one-sided defeat of the Giants is no more. Boarding a train late this afternoon after a lecture by Coach Flaherty, the Redskins were a sober outfit, aware that the picknicking was at an end.

Chicago, the Bears and the National League football championship—that is now the objective. At once expressing confidence that his team would beat the Bears Sunday, and warning his players that they were faced with their toughest game of the season, Flaherty declared the Redskins could win only with their finest performance of the season.

Figures Foe Favorites.

"I don't want you ball players to be misled by the odds in the papers," he told his squad in the final workout at Griffith Stadium today. "I don't care what the expert opinion is, we're no 3-to-2 shots to win. On the strength of the records, it looks to me as if the Bears should be the favorites."

Tonight, as the Redskins' special train chuffed West, Flaherty again called his squad for a blackboard drill. It was these "skull" sessions, held daily before the Giants' game, that Flaherty credits with much of the Redskins' success last Sunday.

Armed with copious reports by his scouts of the Bears' defensive and offensive tactics, Flaherty, chalk in hand, covered every possibility as he outlined the plays. Each member of the Redskins he equipped with individual copies of the Bears' plays that they could

Irish Wake Wins Third, Pays $3.60

Feature Purse Winner Pays $17.60 to Backers.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 8.—Holluschickie, long on name and generally short on courage, forgot to stop today and came from behind to win the Morgan Purse, feature event of an eight-race program. In fact, Holluschickie reversed his tactics, being steadied along instead of trying to run other horses into the ground during the early stages. The 3-year-old son of Display is one of the year's busiest horses. Before today's event, he had been to the post 33 times and had won only two races.

Teddy's Star was installed the odds-on favorite in the field of six, but the color bearer of Mrs. Kenneth Gilpin was forced to surrender to Mrs. P. A. Shaw's colt in the final drive by a margin of a half length. Postponement, owned by C. E. George, of Washington, was third.

Holluschickie had only a scattered backing and he paid a $17.60 mutuel. His time of 1:16 2-5 over a fast track was excellent and only three-fifths of a second over the track record for the "Charles Town Course" of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Highland Song, teamed with Postponement, was first to show in front, followed by Teddy's Star. The two burned oil along the backstretch to be joined by Postponement. Holluschickie was holding a threatening position up to this stage and gradually went through to press Teddy's Star. Jockey Root, on the latter, went to the whip, but the Teddy filly could not resist the colt.

Our Silesia, owned and trained by W. Chaffin, came through the field with a bold rush to get to the front on the backstretch and then defeated Langdon's Mary by a length and a half. Gypwick was third in the limit field of eight. Jockey A. Gaither gave the winner a million-dollar ride and a $11.40 mutuel was displayed.

Baby Princess gave the long shot players a chance to shout in the second race when she drove to a head verdict over Divided Skirt. It was a blanket finish with Steward beaten only a neck for second money. Apprentice Jockey B. Hacker rode the winning filly and helped her overcome trouble at the far turn. The winner paid $32.60.

The money went into machines in thick packages on Irish Wake in the third race and the ancient son of Stimulus proved worthy of every dollar. Guided by Jockey A. Vesseli, Irish Wake forged to the finish line 2½ lengths in advance of Kaleida with Rough Lane third. Irish Wake betters were satisfied with a $3.60 mutuel.

Castabout Wins.

The Bond family, of Baltimore, won it's first purse of the meeting with Castabout in the fourth race. The juvenile filly bounced out of the gate on top and finished eight lengths ahead of La Loutre. Dixie S. might have been closer than third but her saddle slipped and Jockey Vasser could not do her justice. Castabout paid $9.80.

Miss Chicro proved a good thing in the fifth race. This mare, with Apprentice Jockey W. McCadden riding his first race here, turned in a thrilling nose victory over Icy Wind. Miss Chicro took the lead early, surrendered it to Icy Wind swinging for the stretch but rallied again and was up in the final stride. Miss Chicro returned an $11.40 mutuel.

Jockey Vesseli rode his second winner of the day aboard Free, a $4.40 favorite, in the seventh race. Carrying top weight of 117 pounds, the son of Sun Flag took the lead from Penway and finished two and a half lengths in front of Justa Gal. Penway lasted to be third.

Treasury, D.C.F.D. Win Court League Games

In Heurich League basketball games played in the Heurich Gym last night, Treasury defeated Marine Reserves, 40-29, and the D. C. Fire Department trimmed Naval Hospital, 33-20.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

There would have been "Town Hall Tonight" for two ticket holders had Nebraska City won the third race today. They held the only daily-double combinations ending on that horse and he was only 6-1 on the board. They were going to get a $1,536.20 pay-off. Incidentally, there were no tickets sold on the Baby Princess-Mr. Melvin combination. If Mr. Melvin had won the race, the "double" pool would have been paid off to those who had tickets beginning with Baby Princess. The Baby Princess-Irish Wake duo which paid $68.20 was the favorite in the "double" after the first horse got home. When Aneroid marches postward in the Santa Anita Handicap he may have to run against a full brother, No Dice. The latter is 3 years old and Aneroid is 4. Both are by The Porter out of Outburst. Reports from the West Coast that War Admiral will go in the $100,000 added race are as wet as the middle of Lake Michigan. War Admiral, if he starts at all this winter, is going to run in Florida. Freddy Faust is the leading rider at Charles Town to his wins on the Christmas horses. Lou Pikor has regained his form and must be respected for the remainder of the meeting. BILL.

First race—Gold Crescent turned in a nice second here last out and is first on the also eligible list. Needs only to repeat that effort and get into action. Sea Boy showed some speed in that first start and might be the one to beat. Una exhibited ood form at Wheeling and is dangerous.

Second race—Wise Revue has a little class and is making his first start after a long rest. May win at the first asking at this course. Crossin Over has worked well and will be making her first appearance here. Bromide would be a threat if sent postward.

Third race—Beautiful Gean, a winner at Sportsman's Park, carries feather weight in this field and I'm going to string along. Star Turn has speed on occasions and is due to be a keen contender. Miss Adeline has been rested and is a long-shot possibility.

Fourth race—Sun Sweep had enough early foot on the big tracks to warrant respect in a field of this sort. Welsh Lad has won several races this year and is due to be close. Boulder Dam's last race was a beaut.

Fifth race—Brilliant Stone., winner of four straight races, appears to deserve backing in this event. Needs only the right handling. Frederick has seen better days but retains enough class to be a factor. Miss Epe can improve that last.

Sixth race—War Humor, Jim John and Cosmic Prince is the way I prefer them in this test. The top one is in good form and deserves another chance.

Seventh race—Queen Elizabeth should like this distance and the right ride will bring her a set of brackets. Beckville did not like that heavy track last out. Jane McCrea ran some promising races during the fall and could surprise. Stepee would be a threat if the track softens.

Best bet—Brilliant Stone.

Northeast B. C. Plays.

Southwest A. C. and Northeast A. C., strong contenders for the 135-pound football championship of the city, will meet Sunday at 12:30 p. m. in a preliminary to the Taranto and Wasman-Regal contest. The winner between Northeast and Southwest will qualify to play Corr Sport Supply for the undisputed title.

Terrys Home Appliance Co. led by Eddie Keith's 393, Fred Murphy's 390 and Cliff Hollis' 370 moved into second place one game back of the leaders by sweeping their set from Cooke Press, Karl Gochenour's 373 was tops for the printers.

OUR SILESIA went between horses with bold rush to take lead on backstretch and held sway thereafter under good handling. LANGDON'S MARY broke on top, was taken up and put under restraint, moved up with rush, but was taken wide at stretch turn and might have won under different handling. GYPWICK closed some ground. TAR HEEL and LADY GRACELAND had early speed.

BABY PRINCESS, in tight quarters while improving position on inside, swung to outside to reach leaders and held sway in final sixteenth. DIVIDED SKIRT ran FRED'S WARNING into defeat, took command, but hung in final drive while bearing out. STEWARD gained steadily throughout running. FRED'S WARNING faltered.

IRISH WAKE, first away, shook off ROUGH LANE to draw out and was kept to drive to end to hold KALEIDA safe. The latter improved her position steadily and closed gamely. ROUGH LANE weakened from following pace under hustling tactics. NEBRASKA CITY raced wide throughout. MAXIE BINDER had early speed. LILTEEN was sore going to post.

Davidson at Crisis of His Career.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Dec. 8.—What would you do?

I have a friend at West Point. His name is Capt. Garrison H. Davidson. Most folks call him "Gar." At 33, he is a handsome chap of medium height and medium build, but prematurely gray. He is happily marrie dand has two sons, Garry, 2 years old, and Tommy, 10 months.

Most people have heard of Gar Davidson because he has been head coach of the Army's football team for the past five seasons. He is popular and respected among the Nation's fans, among the football people and in the service.

With his clean-cut, athletic figure, his finely chiseled features, his mental alertness, invariable good humor, eager smile and silver thatch, Davidson unconsciously stands as a man of importance. He has what it takes to command attention without effort. Because of these things and the gridiron glamour that gilded him—particularly around the time of the Army-Navy game each year—Gar always seemed to me to be a man of destiny.

Imagine my surprise at learning that Capt. Davidson is not a man of destiny, after all—now that the tumult and shouting have died down. Now that his regime as Army head coach has ended, according to Army custom. Now that Capt. William H. Wood will succeed him in June.

I discover now that Gar is confronted with a problem far more difficult and serious than that which most mortals have been called upon to face. He must decide this month whether it will be better for his family and himself to forsake his beloved game of football and to march on in the modest-salaried security of the Army or whether he should forsake his beloved Army and seek richer rewards as professional football coach. He must choose between the certainty of a goldbraid career and the uncertainty of a gamble for gold.

The future of a college football coach is an out-and-out gamble. It is one of the most precarious of all methods of earning a living. You ride or fall with your teams. Today the alumni carry you on their shoulders. Tomorrow they howl for your scalp.

But the successful football coach generally makes far more money than the successful army officer. Few grid pilots at major universities receive less than $8,000 a year, even as a starting salary. I understand that some of the more successful mentors command around $25,000. In addition there are opportunities to make side money.

A captain in the United States Army receives about $2,900 a year while on duty a home. This may be increased to about $3,400 abroad counting base provisions, etc. Should Gar Davidson remain in the service as captain of engineers and ultimately climb to the rank of brigadier general, his salary then would amount to about 7,500.

In other words his ultimate salary would amount to less per year than he could command now at 33 were he to accept any one of the three coaching positions offered him within the past two months—or any of the several offers made last year that might still be hanging fire. Certain major universities want the captain as their coach and they are willing to pay him. Gar is recognized as an excellent pilot—of the modern school. During his five seasons at the West Point helm, his teams won 34 games, lost 11 and tied one. And the cadets play a fairly stiff schedule. Moreover, his theories on kick-formation deception and weak-side attack and forward passing are among the most advanced in the land.

During 16 years of football, this Davidson chap picked up some very valuable ideas—in addition to his knowledge of hadling men. His grid career started at Stuyvesant High School, New York City, where he played two seasons. He played three seasons as end at West Point, where he later was an assistant coach for six years, before taking the helm.

Davidson likes the Army and its traditions. He likes the men in the service and Army life. He appreciates the security that the service can bring his family. But he knows that it's virtually impossible for an Army officer with a family to save any money. And it's like cutting out his heart to be shifted away from the gridiron. He realizes the opportunities that more money could bring to his wife and kids. But he realizes, too, what failure as a college coach might mean to his family. So he can't figure it out. Gar is pondering this problem night and day—hopeful that he may make the right decision in this most important step of his life.

Three of the four Army coaches who preceded Gar since the World War became college coaches—Ralph Sasse, Biff Jones and John McEwan. Charley Daly remained in the service. I wonder what Davidson would do? What would you do?

Records Set By Pro Grid 'Freshmen'

Sammy Baugh, Tinsley Figure in Two Performances.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 8.—National Football League "freshmen" accounted for or shared in three of the four new individual records set during the 1937 season, according to final statistics released today.

The two recruits, just one year out of college, were Slingin' Sam Baugh, of the Washington Redskins, who meet the Chicago Bears for the league title on Sunday, and Gaynell Tinsley, of the Chicago Cardinals.

Baugh, pitching passes with even greater proficiency than in his college days at Texas Christian, set a new standard of 81 completed aerials. His performance topped by four the previous mark set a year ago by Arnie Herber, of Green Bay.

Tinsley, former Louisiana State end, set two pass-catching records. His 675 yards gained on pass catches bettered the 1936 record of 526 yards set by Don Hutson, of Green Bay, while in last Sunday's final game against the Bears he was on the receiving end of L. S. U. teammate Joe Reed's aerial for a total gain of 95 yards, 12 better than the Herber-Hutson long-distance mark set in 1934.

Ground-gaining—Cliff Battles of Washington, whose 874 yards in 9 games was the second-best performance in league history and made him the first player to win this title twice. He first led the league in 1933.

Passing efficiency—Bob Monnett, Green Bay, 50.6 per cent. Ed Danowski of the New York Giants, with 66 completed of 134 for 49.2 per cent, was tops among those throwing more than 100 aerials.

Best ball-carrying average—Ernie Caddel, Detroit, 429 yards in 76 attempts for 5.6 yards per try.

Big Leagues Approve Five for Hall of Fame

Chicago, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The American and National Leagues today jointly approved five additional baseball greats for the game's hall of fame.

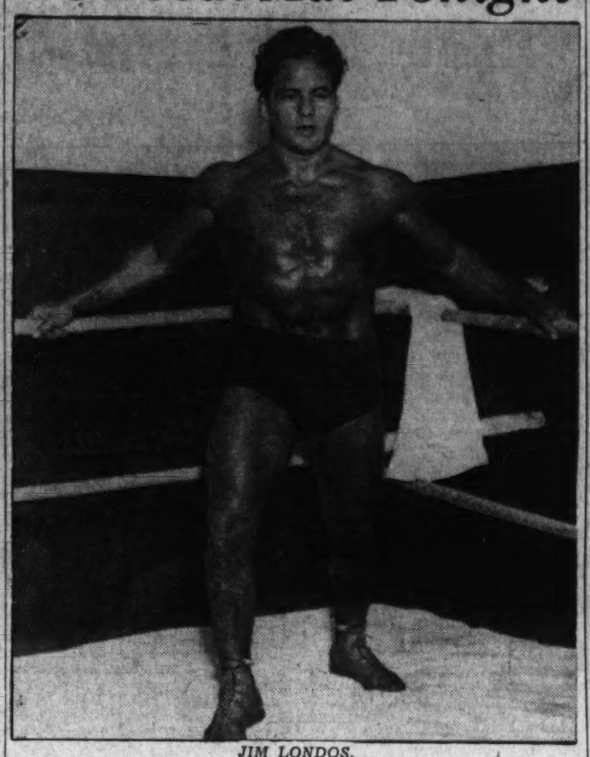
Jim Londos Returns To Local Mat Tonight



JIM LONDOS.

Meets Billy Bartush in Feature at Arena After 3-Year Absence; Capacity Crowd to See Bout; Women Wrestlers on Supporting Card.

Mighty Jim Londos, slightly older, but still possessing the showmanship and power that have made him wrestling's biggest box office attraction, will go on display tonight at Turner's Arena, meeting Billy Bartush, the veteran Lithuanian, in the feature match.

It will be a one-fall-to-a-finish match and will be supported by what Wrestling Impressario Turner calls a "sterling card."

Making her debut in a special added attraction will be Mildred Burke, the world's feminine welterweight champion, who is to meet Clarice Davis, of Central City, Iowa. Their bout will be one-fall-to-a-finish. Miss Burke, said to be a prototype of Cora Livingstone, the once great women's champion, is said to be even more sensational than Clara Mortensen, the lightweight titleholder, who has performed here before capacity crowds.

In the semiwindup, 45 minutes, Billy Hanson, of Salt Lake City, meets Franz Schuman, German Hercules. In 30-minute bouts Al Periera, who drew with Londos the other night in Baltimore when the ring collapsed, makes his debut against Abe (King Kong) Kashey, and Henry Kulkovich, the Polish wild man, meets Paddy Mack, the Irish boy.

Jeem admits that he is back in this country to settle once and for all the question of wrestling supremacy. He is claiming the international championship, and as proof that his claims are justifiable, points to the gold belts awarded him in South Africa, Greece and in Baltimore. It was in Baltimore recently that Jim defeated George Pancheff, the Australian champion, and the Maryland Athletic Commission has recognized him as titleholder.

Londos will enter the ring weighing 205 pounds, his customary weight. He will have some new tricks to show—some tricks he picked up in South Africa, where he thrilled the multitude.

Bartush for years was a big drawing card and is being pressed into service here in view of his popularity and the fact that he hasn't performed in town for a number of seasons.

Anacostia High's Grid Debut Presents Headache to Officials

Appearance of Seventh Football Team Into Inter-High Series Will Necessitate Drastic Changes in 1938 Schedule Making.

By Jack Munhall.

The 1938 debut of Anacostia in the interhigh school football series, while welcomed, even now looms as a headache for the schedule committee which will meet this week or next to draw up plans for the ensuing year. A drastic revision in the series which has functioned successfully and almost without change for 38 years is almost certain to be made at this meeting.

Anacostia's eleven will bring the number of competing teams to seven, largest in history, and will necessitate playing of six additional games. The schedule now being followed since Woodrow Wilson entered this year calls for 15 games, which consume all the time permitted by the school authorities. The interhigh football season in the past has started midway in September and finished late in November. These dates, although they have varied slightly in previous years, are pretty definitely settled.

Therein lies the present difficulty. A 21-game schedule will be necassary to include Anacostia under the present arrangements. Since the series games are played only on Tuesday and Friday afternoons and there are only eight Tuesdays and Fridays in each month, a new system must be drawn up. In all probability the committee will most seriously consider one of three alternatives. They are:

1. Provide for another day on which to hold games.
2. Hold two games on Tuesdays or Fridays.
3. Divide the series into two divisions with the winners to meet for the championship.

Of these three alternatives the first seems most likely to be adopted, according to Birch E. Bayh, head of the public school health and physical education department.

This is not necessarily because it appears the one most practical, but because it appears the one most promising to be popular. The second suggestion will probably meet only with one objection, but a most potent one in the board of principals which is expected to frown upon the idea. The third alternative will occasion many disagreements.

Ever since the inauguration of the series elevens from Central, Tech and Eastern have dominated the championships. If the plan for dividing the series into two divisions is followed, a peace committee will also be needed to pacify the above trio of schools, which certainly will not want to be placed in the same division. On the other hand the weaker sisters, Roosevelt, Western, Wilson and Anacostia will want to be in the same group, to have a better chance.

And so the controversies will rage. It will be up to the three-man schedule committee consisting of Leonard T. Brown, chairman; John Brougher, assistant principal of Central, and Robert Anderson, assistant principal of Western, to hit upon a satisfactory method.

Another point which undoubtedly will be brought up when the schedule committee meets with the board of principals and Bayh to set forth their suggestions is that of night football. Bayh has advocated the nocturnal game for two years but has met with unyielding rebuffs. However, with high school attendance at a low ebb, reconsideration of a financial nature may readily be made. Night football has an excellent precedent in night basketball which was begun and proved most successful last year. It will again be in vogue this season.

Returning to the football situation, it seems that no matter what course is followed this coming year it probably will again be altered in 1939 or 1940 when Northside High School will ingress into the series.

Cards Wallop State Normal, 43-17, in Debut

Ambrose Leads Attack With 21 Points; Carroll and McKenna Help.

Basketball's new rules and Catholic University's new basbeball team made their debut last night in the Brookland ice box, but it was the same old story for Maryland State Normal's unhappy representatives. The Cards won by the telltale figures of 43-17.

With Master "Horseneck" Ambrose doing considerable damage to the Cards, the 1937-38 successors to the Reindeers won the first half, 21-7, and then proceeded to make it official by taking the second, 22-10. Maryland State Normal, meanwhile, was galloping around at a furious pace, but getting nowhere rapidly.

Ambrose, a strapping fellow with a bouncer's build, accumulated 21 points for his side, but finally had to be removed after attempting to punch a hole in the floor with his finger. Trainer George Lentz diagnosed the injury as an acute case of swollen finger, painful but not serious. Master "Horseneck" will be available for duty again next week.

The new rules speeded up play but slowed down the Normal boys, who exhausted their second wind and were waiting for fresh supplies while their hosts were making off with the ball game. Ambrose was well supported by "Irish" Carroll, who tallied 9 points, and Ed McKenna, who contributed 7. Guinan's floor play was outstanding.

Wendlandt Wins Handball Upset

Rankings in the Y. M. C. A. handball tourney were drastically revised last night when George Wendlandt upset Tom Mangan, 21-6, 12-21, 21-4, to move into joint leadership with Jack Schwartz, who was extended in disposing of Gustave Goldstein, 21-8, 20-21, 21-14.

Youthful Walter Engelhardt held on to the runner-up position with a 21-5, 13-21, 21-12 victory over Art Wondrack.

Other results: Newman defeated Payne, 14-21, 21-15, 21-19. Moore trounced Gillette, 21-17, 21-8, and the Wondrack-W. Englehardt team defeated the Goldstein-C. Englehardt duo, 21-20, 21-9.

Pete Sarron Wins Lightweight Debut.

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Petey Sarron, sad-faced Syrian from Birmingham, Ala., and former N. B. A. featherweight champion, made his debut into the lightweight ranks tonight by defeating Carl (Red) Guggino, of Hartford, Conn., in a 10-round bout in the New York Hippodrome. Weights were 133½ for Sarron and 130½ for Guggino.

Sarron, who dropped his 126-pound title to Henry Armstrong in Madison Square Garden two months ago, had a hard time getting started tonight, but once he overcame his faulty timing, he waded in and did a workmanlike job on the former Tampa, Fla., battler, who has projected himself into the top flight of the lightweight division since coming North less than two years ago.

Catholic U. Signs With Mexican Team

Negotiations for a home-and-home series with an all-star Mexican college team were completed yesterday by Catholic University athletic officials, the first game to be played next October at Brookland.

The contract was signed by Edwardo Roman, coach of the Mexican Naval Academy team, who will have charge of the foreign team, and a representative of the Washington school. Roman also is attempting to schedule a game with a New York eleven.

This game, along with the American U. contest, and rumors of another with Shenandoah, give the Cardinals a good start toward one of their most pretentious football schedules in recent years.

Local fans may be getting their last glimpse of JIM LONDOS when he performs at Turner's Arena tonight . . . telegrams have rained upon him many offers to return to Europe where the wrestling business is reaching mountainous proportions . . . rumors have it that there is much money in circulation among continental sports fans, especially those in gay Paree, where the Centennial Fair is in progress . . . and they pay plenty to see good wrestling, hence the big demand for JIM . . . Bob Schwartz, Nose Injured, May Not Fight

Eastern Golden Gloves Champ Suffers Injury in Bout in Boston.

Alexandria, Va., Dec. 8.—Bobby Schwartz, District of Columbia Golden Gloves light-heavyweight champion and winner in the All-Eastern tournament held at Boston on Monday, may not be able to compete in the All-America finals at Boston next Monday night, when winners of the Eastern tourney oppose the West Coast winners, it was learned today. A nose injury, sustained in his championship fight with Vincent Pellegrini, of New York, may keep him out of action for at least a month, and he may not fight at all unless an operation is performed, an examination by Dr. James T. Burch, Alexandria eye, ear and nose specialist, disclosed this afternoon.

Schwartz was one of two Washington entries to win out in the Eastern finals. The other was Bobby Mathias, National Guard slugger, who won out in the 147-pound division.

No Trading As Leagues End Meeting

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—The dullest major league baseball meeting in recent years ended today with both the National and American circuits pulling a "balk."

There were no "hands across the table" as the two leagues met jointly before Commissioner K. M. Landis. Club owners did not even discuss their surprisingly divergent actions of their individual sessions—the American League's decision to retain the "rabbit" ball next season after the senior circuit had voted for a heavier and slower sphere.

Failing to get together on the ball question, after President Ford Frick of the National League had said both circuits agreed a year ago to use a slower pellet, the majors wound up their session by parting with a lot of money—something most clubs failed to do throughout an extremely dull "ivory" market. The majors appropriated $100,000 for baseball's centennial celebration in 1939 and renewed a $20,000 sum to the American Legion to sponsor junior tournaments.

There was not a single deal of importance during the major meetings. As Frick was given a vote of confidence by senior circuit magnates in being renamed president for three years, managers roamed hotel lobbies and succeeded in creating nothing more than rumor "smoke" which continued to drift about as the delegates packed bags for departure. The Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds, it was reported, still were dickering.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Gather Strength as Trading Increases; Bonds and Wheat Firm.

New York, Dec. 8.—Financial markets looked more encouraging in some sectors. Stocks gathered strength as the trading wore on and closed with gains numerous, some of them running to three or four points. Stock turnover ran well over a million shares, something unusual in recent sessions. United States bonds hardened and commodities held even. May wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 94½ cents a bushel.

A characteristic of the stock market in the past two weeks has been its ruggedness in the face of almost unbroken adverse industrial news. A body of investors apparently think that the recent low prices had sufficiently discounted all that it was worth chancing in th way of further business depression, and many stocks clearly had gone further than current suffering in profits suggested. The market today started out along the same course.

The midweek batch of business reports showed reduction in activity. The Iron Age's review of the steel trade was perhaps the most encouraging of the reports. That journal found "increasing signs of a turn in the situation" after the December inventory taking, although "steel buying generally is still at the stagnation point." Some price cutting has gone on in finished steel products, but nominal prices have held, and much is made of the steel scrap market. Scrap, often regarded as a sensitive barometer, is begininng to feel a change, says the Iron Age, even in advance of mill buying.

General Motors.

The General Motors report on November sales revealed a sharp reduction—nearly 25 per cent—in public buying, and Sears-Roebuck & Co., doing business largely in rural communities, had a drop in sales for the four weeks ended December 3, the first decline from the corresponding period of the previous year since June, 1933. Some chain stores are still showing gains. In any event figures eventually will show a fall in retail buying, but the retailers usually feel the depression after the heavy industries have become acquainted with it.

Movement of goods over the rail and the motor roads is slackening. Railroad freight car loadings last week rose over the preceding week (which contained the holiday), but fell nearly 14 per cent under a year ago, according to estimates made by the Sun from reports of leading carriers in advance of full reports, which will be available Friday.

Opening prices for stocks were fractionally better or unchanged in the majority of cases, after which the tone hardened a little. The market ran into a buying flurry in late morning, with volume heavy enough for a few minutes to send the ticker behind in reporting. Prices did not fall back much after that, and in late afternoon progress was resumed. Steel was a favorite, after an unchanged opening at 58⅛, and it climbed 2 points on a fairly large volume to cross 60.

Railroads Firm.

Trading during most of the day was less spirited than in the closing few minutes of yesterday, but on the whole the day was a more cheerful one. Railroads in particular were firm in the face of lower traffic movement. They were helped by the rumor of an early "emergency" freight rate increase, a rumor which seemed to be based almost entirely upon logic. The fact that the rails, facing an unpleasant winter, could find friends on the bullish side did much to encourage purchasing in other sections of the stock list. Union Pacific jumped 3 points.

Motor shares improved. Chrysler topped 60 and General Motors held a good fraction higher. Airplane stocks continued to hold speculative favor and the gold shares were not neglected. A revival of interest in the building stocks, including General Electric and Westinghouse, took place possibly on suggestions of high authorities that even more than the Government is now proposing ought to be done to stimulate construction. Gypsum climbed 4 to 5 points.

Cotton.

The Department of Agriculture presumably decided that it would hurt the dog less to cut off his tail by inches than by taking a single whack at it. Early season cotton estimates cannot be accurate, inasmuch as the crop continues to make into late summer, and the size also depends to a certain extent upon weather conditions in the picking season. However, the hugeness of this year's crop could not be mistaken, and while even the early estimates of the department were large, the recent successive increases in the guess suggest that it was considered the addition of half a million bales or so a month would relieve a weak market.

Steel.

It is taken for granted that the sharp depression in business in recent months, and particularly last month, will be reflected in a large cut in the tonnage shipped by the United States Steel Corporation in November. The figures will be announced Friday. With operations now running at well under a third of capacity, the corporation scarcely is making any money, but third quarter payments will be affected by payments received in third quarter on work done earlier in the year, as well as by the current operations. Some year-end adjustments also may enter into the accounts, as they frequently do.

General Motors Corp. Has Best November

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—World sales of General Motors cars to dealers in November were the best for the month on record at 195,136 units, the corporation reported today. World sales compared with 166,939 units in October and 191,720 in November last year. Sales to United States consumers were 117,387 units against 107,216 in October and 155,552 in November, 1936. Sales to United States dealers were 153,184 units against 136,370 last month and 156,041 in November last year.

Norway Rules Against Bond Payments in Gold

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 8 (AP).—Norway's supreme court unanimously ruled today that Norwegian government bonds floated in the United States in 1923 need not be paid in gold. The ruling affected securities valued at about $123,000,000.

The decision reversed a 1936 verdict of a city court that the bonds must be redeemed in dollars equivalent to their gold value before devaluation of United States currency. The finance ministry had appealed the lower court's ruling.

Cotton Higher; Crop Is Larger

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Cotton advanced today in the face of a Government estimate for a crop of 18,746,000 bales, the largest on record. March sold up from 7.88 to 7.98 and closed at the high with final prices up 6 to 11 points.

The increase of 503,000 bales over the November crop indication exceeded trade expectations, but failed to attract selling and prices advanced immediately after the figures were posted. Effects of the Government loan program in holding cotton off the market and a belief that large crop figures had been discounted, limited offerings. Trade and foreign buying was followed up by moderate Wall street and local demand.

Bob Burns Says—

I felt so sorry for my Aunt Sophie when I saw her on the street the other day. She looked like a broken woman and when I asked her what the trouble was, she said "Oh, it's that husband of mine! I've been so happy because he's been callin' up every afternoon and sayin' such sweet things over the telephone and jest today I found out that it wasn't him at all. He's been goin' to the baseball games every afternoon and he's had his office boy call up instead."

I says "Well, surely you can tell your own husband's voice from that of the office boy," and she says "No, you see I been goin' to bridge parties every afternoon and I been havin' the cook answer the telephone!"

Resume of Winnie Winkle . . .

Winnie Winkle has been married to Will Wright, young engineer. Will becomes innocently involved in the disappearance of some of his company's funds and lands in jail. Then Winnie meets one of her former bosses, Ben Baker, who loves her. He learns of her plight and offers her a job again which she accepts. Will is released from jail. When Winnie tells Will that Ben Baker is the benefactor, he becomes suspicious and jealous.

But in the meantime Ben and Winnie are making a wide search for a nurse, who they hope will help to prove Will's innocence. Now go on with the story on this page.

Behrle Convicted Of Perjury After Lapse of Memory

Harry (Spike) Behrle, companion of Joseph E. O'Brien and William P. (Country) Carpenter when O'Brien was felled by gangland bullets last December, was convicted of perjury by a District court jury that deliberated less than 20 minutes yesterday.

Behrle was charged with having a forgetful memory when he was called upon to identify gangsters who shot O'Brien and who had forced him into a machine just a few paces from the spot where O'Brien was shot.

Carpenter and O'Brien also were indicted for perjury. They will be tried later.

Charles R. (Rags) Warring and five associates all were subsequently convicted of shooting O'Brien.

The American consul general at Hankow has sent an urgent request to the Provincial Governor of Hunan for all possible measures to effect release of the priest.

U. S., Numbers Men Reach Tax Truce

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau and two admitted "numbers business" operators of Richmond, Va., reached a tentative agreement yesterday on the payment of disputed income taxes.

Counsel for W. H. Sampson and James K. Eagle stipulated with bureau attorneys that they would submit a proposal for payment by December 22.

The stipulation ended a hearing before the Board of Tax Appeals on a petition by Sampson and Eagle for redetermination of deficiency assessments of approximately $223,000 for the years 1932 through 1935. Eagle was on the stand when the stipulation was made. Parties to the hearing are to return before the board December 22.

Md. Gossip Slayer Is Denied Parole

Baltimore, Dec. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Rachel Gillespie, convicted of Cecil County's "gossip slaying" last year, and sentenced to four years in prison, lost a bid for freedom today when Parole Commissioner J. Cookman Boyd held she should serve half her sentence before asking parole.

Mrs. Gillespie's application was one of nine Commissioner Boyd refused at hearings today. He approved four and ordered one case held for further hearing.

Boyd said evidence in the "gossip slaying" convinced him Mrs. Gillespie "had sense enough and intelligence enough to know what she was doing—the woman she killed did not have a chance."

1 Dead, 5 Hurt in Air Crash.
